WAS HE ALIVE? Controversial photo shows North Vietnamese soldier falling from U.S. Army helicopter. Illinois school teacher said picture was taken by a friend from another helicopter, and shows enemy soldier being hurled to his death after refusing to answer interrogators' questions. The army says the man was already dead, and that the allegation that he was thrown out alive came from a fake account of the 1969 incident written by a U.S. soldier to his girl-friend.

Uganda Strikes Into Tanzania

KAMPALA (UPI) — Ugandan forces crossed the border into Tanzania today and battled a combined force of Tanzanian troops and Uganda exile guerrillas, a Ugandan military spokesman said.

However, Tanzania denied there was fighting within its frontiers. A government spokesman in Dar-Es-Salaam said the military command in the alleged battle area just across the border from Mutukula, southwest Uganda, reported "everything is quiet."

The news came as African leaders launched desperate diplomatic attempts to head off open war between the two nations. There have been several border clashes and Ugandan planes have bombed towns in Tanzania.

Complicating the situation for the Arab world was the reported arrival in Uganda of 400 Libyan troops armed with Soviet and Chinese weapons. Their transport planes had been turned back by the Sudan when they landed to refuel. The moves created a diplomatic crisis between Sudan and Libya. The planes later flew on to Uganda by a different route.

A Ugandan military spokesman in a broadcast from Kampala said Ugandan forces crossed into the neighboring East African state during the morning.

"There has been very hot fighting between the Uganda army and Tanzanian troops and guerrillas," he said. He said Joshua Wakholi, a former minister in the government of deposed president Milton Obote, had been captured.

The spokesman said there had been heavy casualties on the enemy side. He blamed President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania for the crisis.

"It would be a good thing if Nyerere himself was killed instead of innocent people," he said, calling on the Tanzanian leader to withdraw his forces.

Further complicating the situation was the plight of Asians who have been expelled from Uganda by the Adi Amin government. Airlines stepped up flights to Britain carrying the Asians who were driven out on grounds they exerted too much control on Ugandan business and industry.

The renewed fighting came only hours after Nyerere appealed to President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to intervene personally in the Uganda-Tanzania dispute, according to a Cairo report by the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram.

Diplomatic sources in the Egyptian capital said an Egyptian presidential envoy was already en route to either Dar-Es-Salaam or Kampala for talks aimed at patching up the dispute.

The diplomatic offensive followed radio reports from Kenya and Tanzania Friday night that Libyan transport aircraft carrying 400 troops and a supply of Soviet and Chinese weapons had arrived in Uganda.

The Libyan men and arms were intercepted Wednesday in Sudan. But Al Ahram said Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiry reversed his decision to cut off the shipment "due to the people's and army's resentment" at the move.

UGANDANS ARRIVE

TORONTO (CP) — The first Ugandan refugees — a young married couple and their grandmother — arrived in Canada Friday night, exhausted after 18 hours of flying via London from their East African home, 8,000 miles away.

The young couple was too afriad of retaliation against families and friends still in Uganda to permit their names to be used.

"It would be a privilege to have my name published," said the husband, a 33-year-old insurance clerk. "But members of my family are remaining there. There might be trouble."

He said he had seen Asians shot dead since President Idi Amin issued the expulsion order for 60,000 Ugandan Asians holding British passports.

The two are the vanguard of thousands of Ugandans expected to make their home in Canada.

Martial Law Clamped On Philippines

Times News Services

MANILA — President Ferdinand Marcos formally proclaimed martial law throughout the Philippines today in the face of what he called a conspiracy to overthrow the government by violence.

The president made the announcement in a country-wide broadcast 17 hours after government troops in a pre-dawn swoop closed newspaper offices and radio and television stations.

He said an attempt had been made Friday to assassinate his defence secretary, Juan Ponce Enrile, who escaped unhurt when bullets riddled his limousine.

The Philippines cut communications with the outside world earlier today for the first time since gaining independence from the United States 26 years ago.

Marcos said he had ordered the arrest of "those directly involved in the conspiracy to overthrow the government by violence and subversion."

The president did not name those arrested, but at least 20 persons were rounded up early today — including one of his most outspoken critics, Senator Benigno Aquino, secretary-general of the opposition Liberal party.

The president said Filipinos would be temporarily restricted from going abroad. Exceptions would have to be authorized by the government.

In declaring martial law, Marcos has gambled that his people will agree with him that the Communist guerrilla threat justifies suspension of democracy in the Philippines for the first time since independence.

For more than a year, Marcos has held out the possibilitiy of imposing martial law if the Maoist New Peoples' Army continued to grow stronger. His critics have charged that he deliberately exaggerated the Communist threat in order to lay the groundwork for authoritarian measures.

Tanaka Shades Nixon

By JOHN BURNS
Special to the Times

PEKING — When the date of President Richard Nixon's visit to China was announced, The People's Daily reserved space for the item at the bottom of its front page. But Friday, when it announced that the visit of Japan's prime minister, Kakuei Tanaka, would begin on Monday, the paper threw its reserve overboard and accorded the item pride of place at the top of the page.

By giving bigger play to the Tanaka story the editors of the Communist party journal were giving expression to a feeling that has been palpable wherever Chinese have gathered in the past few days — that the prospect of rapproachment with Japan is even more exciting and dramatic than the pursuit of detente with the United States.

To the ordinary Chinese the Nixon visit was a spectacular but remote event. He may have grasped its political significance, but he could scarcely feel touched by it in a personal way, for America and Americans have always been a distant and relatively unknown quantity to him.

The same cannot be said of Japan and the Japanese, whose encroachment on Chinese territory began towards the end of the last century and culminated in the brutal occupation of Manchuria in which 10 million Chinese are said to have died.

It is no wonder then that Tanaka's five-day visit is an event which engages the feelings of the Chinese people, just as it does those of the people of Japan, who are said to place the normalization of relations with China ahead of all other priorities in their national life.

Tanaka has already said that he will begin the visit by apologizing to Premier Chou En-lai for the misery visited upon China by Japan. That

LOTTERY LAWS TO BE STUDIED

Lotteries in B.C. are likely to be subjected to a fresh set of regulations under the new NDP government, a spokesman for Attorney-General Alex Macdonald indicated Friday.

Dr. Raymond Rogers, Macdonald's administrative assistant, said the attorney-general's position on lotteries is that the laws governing them should be examined.

Earlier, Premier Dave Barrett said his party is in favor of provincial lotteries, but he declined to specify when B.C. might start one of its own, or who would be the beneficiaries of the profits.

Strangler Loose In Ont. Town

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — An at-dusk attacker who police believe may be mentally disturbed has prompted dozens of calls from anxious parents responding to a police call for public vigilance.

Two teen-aged boys have been choked into unconsciousness in episodes 11 days apart and the normal Friday-night complement of eight police officers was augmented by five more in an attempt to catch the culprit. One officer said the attacker may have thought he killed the boys.

Police said extra night men also are scheduled for next week.

Chief Harold Basse said it is feared a young man "with psychopathic tendencies of some sort is on the loose."

In the first incident at dusk on Sept. 10, a 13-year-old boy was in his backyard firing paper clips with an elastic band. An older youth grabbed him from behind and pushed his hand over the boy's mouth. He said he had been hit by a clip.

After the victim passed out, the attacker released him and disappeared.

The second incident Thursday at 8:15 followed the same pattern.

A 14-year-old boy was in front of his house when a youth described as between 16 and 19 years old with long brown hair accused him of throwing something at him, Chief Basse said. The attacker grabbed the boy by the throat and "cut off his air until he passed out." When the boy revived, the attacker was gone.

Crash Kills Sidney Woman

A Sidney woman was killed and the pilot of a light aircraft was uninjured when their plane crashed near Nahmint Lake, 15 miles west of Port Alberni, this morning.

A spokesman from the Rescue Co-ordination Centre said the plane, a home-built amphibious craft, piloted by Dick Thuillier of Sidney, was reported overdue Friday.

The search was hampered by bad weather through the night and it was resumed this morning when the destroyed aircraft was discovered by a Canadian Forces helicopter from Comox.

Scholar Denied Entry

TORONTO (CP) — A Marxist scholar, hired by York University in Toronto and on salary since July 1, has been refused entry into Canada from England.

John Saywell, dean of arts at York, was informed Friday that Istvan Meszaros, 42, would not be given a visa to enter Canada as a landed immigrant.

He had resigned a senior post at the University of Sussex, where he had been teaching for six years, to come to York.

University officials had no idea why he was declined entry.

"Somewhere along the line, someone has flagged him as a security risk," said Dr. Saywell. "I don't know what happened but we're still trying to get him here."

Dr. Meszaros was a member of the 1956 provisional government in Hungary and fled to Italy that year when Russian Stalinists took power. He now is a British subject.

He is a Marxist theorist, literary critic, political scientist and teacher of philosophy and ethics.

Later, federal Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey said he will intervene in the case.

Squad Fights UIC Cheating

OTTAWA (CP) — The Unemployment Insurance Commission announced Friday it has launched a broad-scale attack to combat cheating and other abuses in the unemployment insurance plan.

UIC chairman Guy Cousineau said the commission is recruiting 80 investigators to delve into suspected cases of fraud. Twenty are already on the job and the others are to be at work by mid-November, bringing the total number of investigators to 307.

"There's much more to come," Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey said of the program.

Prime Minister Trudeau has mentioned abuse of unemployment benefits several times on the Oct. 30 federal election campaign trail.

He said Thursday in Winnipeg that government concern over the abuse is why more inspectors have been hired to track down fraudulent claimants.

The announcement came in the wake of charges by Conservative leader Robert Stanfield that the state of the unemployment insurance plan, as it now is operating, constitutes "a national scandal."

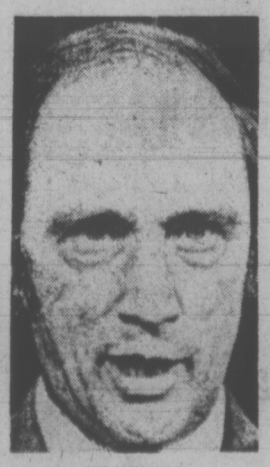

Mackasey said the Conservative leader "hadn't the faintest idea what he is talking about," and that he would "put the record straight" in a series of campaign speeches across the country.

Cousineau said the new program will also involve 26 major employers on the West Coast who have agreed to help the commission track down insurance claimants who turn down "legitimate job offers."

Trudeau, Lewis Clash on Open Line Radio Program

TRUDEAU

Special to The Times

Trudeau, who was a guest on the program, accused the NDP leader of raising during the election campaign the "phoney issue" of corporate ripoffs to mollify the waffle wing of his party.

Within minutes, Lewis was on the telephone to the program, charging the prime minister with distorting employment statistics and with painting an unfair picture of the motivations of those without jobs in Canada today.

A caller to the program had said that Lewis has shown federal incentives to corporations — the NDP leader has called them "corporate welfare bums" — haven't worked to provide the number of new jobs needed.

The caller said that corporations receiving the incentives in the form of grants or deferred taxes establish plants in one area providing new jobs, while closing down operations in another so that there is no real net gain in jobs available.

Trudeau retorted that the NDP during discussion of the white paper on taxation, which would have if implemented, brought in laws "tougher" on corporations did not support the government when it was pressured not to be so tough.

The prime minister said the reason for the NDP silence then was that the party was having difficulties with its waffle wing and is now "creating the phoney issue of corporate ripoffs" to appease this wing following its expulsion from the Ontario party.

Lewis, reached by the radio station denied the issue is a phoney one, and stated he regards it as "a very major and basic issue for the welfare of Canadians."

Prompted by Trudeau, Lewis agreed that more new jobs have been created in Canada than in any other society, and the prime minister thanked him for being honest.

But the NDP leader said he is more concerned about the number of jobs which have not been created in Canada.

Trudeau said that so far during the campaign he has met many employers who insist there are jobs available, and asked Lewis if he agrees that Canadians are becoming more selective of the type of job they will take to get off unemployment insurance.

"I don't think that you are, in my opinion, putting it in a fair way at all," said Lewis, pointing out that a Canadian Manpower survey has disclosed that for every job available, there are 10 or 12 Canadians looking for work.

"You are trying to suggest," he told Trudeau, "and I hope you don't intend to, that there are jobs enough for more than 500,000 unemployed, and that's clearly wrong."

"There are not enough jobs for 90 per cent of the people," Lewis snapped.

After Trudeau stated that three-per-cent unemployment is regarded as acceptable, and repeated that Canadians are becoming more selective in taking jobs, Lewis told him that the way he was putting the issue "really distorts it."

Even if there were 45,000 to 50,000 jobs available, this would leave more than 400,000 unemployed in Canada.

Trudeau retorted that this would have the effect of dropping the unemployment rate from its present six per cent to about 4.2 per cent.

Just as the two party leaders' discussion was becoming more heated, the program's moderator cut them off for a commercial break.

The Liberals have rejected the idea of a television debate among the party leaders as was held during the 1968 campaign, and Friday's brief encounter was the first direct confrontation of a sort so far in this campaign.

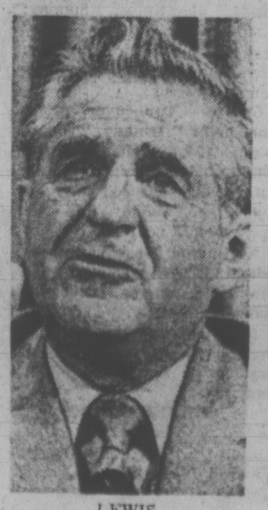

Today, Prime Minister Trudeau takes his western tour to Vancouver, then rests Sunday and Monday with no campaigning. Progressive-Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield goes east, visiting Fredericton, Charlottetown and St. John's, Nfld., today before also taking a two-day break.

Lewis is in London, Ont., today and Toronto Sunday. Social Credit Leader Real Caouette is scheduled to begin another swing through the prairies on the weekend.

DEVELOPMENT COST COULD CURB POWER

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority has harnessed only 13 per cent of its hydro-electric potential in the province, but Hydro director Gordon Shrum said Friday that the immense cost of the job ahead may cut back B.C.'s fast-growing demand for energy.

He told the Institute of Power Engineers that during the 1960s growth in electrical power consumption averaged 10.7 per cent a year and is now increasing at 12 per cent a year.

Dr. Shrum said B.C., unlike the United States, is faced with an almost embarrassing array of fuel sources, but he expects that the province will need $4 billion to develop that capacity from 1975 until the end of the century.

"Though we may have the energy sources we may not have the money," he said.

Straggling Parade Greets Socred Chief

By PAT DUFOUR

It was to be a triumphal march.

It turned out to be a straggling parade.

Real Caouette, leader of the Social Credit Party of Canada, arrived in the Inner Harbor Friday, all set for an evening on the hustings. In the shadows of the Legislative Buildings, from which his party had ruled this province for 20 years, a small rather unorganized crowd waited.

He was to make an impressive entrance at the Empress Hotel, escorted there by the skirl of bagpipes, beat of drums and a walking cavalcade of party enthusiasts.

The bagpipes and drum beats were supplied by two teen-agers. Two banners, bearing the legend "Freedom —not Debt" were raised by volunteers.

That left a handful, including the three Vancouver Island candidates and campaign organizers, to follow behind.

At the press conference that followed in his suite, there was little manifestation of the showmanship that Caouette is credited with.

He looked tired. We had been told by Stockwell Day, Social Credit candidate for Nanaimo, Cowichan and the Islands, that Caouette had undergone a gall bladder operation a month ago. This might have been the reason.

There was no gesturing — no cracking of jokes with hidden jibes in them — just a determined effort to make his points.

These were mainly based on the need for monetary reform and abolishment of the present welfare system to be replaced by an annual guaranteed income.

He was asked for his stand on the threat of an oil tanker route from Alaska to Cherry Point in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

He was queried as to whether he thought search and rescue facilities were adequate.

In each case the answer was that he had not really thought about the issue, "not at all."

Day, a commercial fisherman, helped out with a little sideline prodding.

After this, Caouette tempered his answers — these matters, he said, would have to be considered, and he was sure the advice of his friend, Day, would be of assistance.

Asked why his party had met defeat in the provincial election, his reply was:

"The people of B.C. have been spoiled by Social Credit administration for the past 20 years. It's just like a child — give him as much as you can and he'll never be satisfied."

He was asked if he would consider having Phil Gaglardi as a candidate.

He would. "I know him, he's a friend of mine. There's always a ground somewhere where we can understand each other."

Organizers excused him. He had to have a special session with them before the public meeting, scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Oak Bay Junior High School.

On stage in the school auditorium, Caouette was in his element.

The pithy wisecracking, the Gallic shrugs, drew appreciation from the corwd.

He spelled out the main plans of his party's platform, loud and clear.

The Bank of Canada Act, he said, should be amended. It now provides that provinces can borrow up to 25 per cent of their budget for a period not exceeding six months. This period, he pounded home, should be 60 years, the same time limit enjoyed by India on the recent $48 million interest-free loan given her by Canada.

The present welfare system, he said, encouraged people to be lazy and cheat.

Throw it out, he urged, and have a system that would provide an annual guaranteed income of $1,200 for single persons, $2,400 for couples and $250 a piece for every child. This, he said, should not be taken away if the recipients earned money.

"It wouldn't cost a dime more than the welfare system with all its bureaucrats and inspectors to see if we have a small job and take away our welfare."

He proposed a basic tax exemption of $2,500 for single persons and $5,000 for a married couple, an exemption of $500 per child.

The old age pension, he said, should be $200 and due at the age of 60. The wife should get $150 whether she was 60 or not.

He ridiculed the commission on bilingualism and biculturalism:

"It took $52 million of our tax money to find out we speak French in Quebec and you speak English in B.C."

It petered out after an organizer announced a collection would be held to raise funds.

done, the two men will buckle down to talks which are expected to produce a declaration ending the state of war that has formally existed between the two countries for more than 25 years.

That alone would be a great step forward but the two leaders are expected to go a great deal further, agreeing to the early establishment of full diplomatic relations and the rupture of Japan's existing diplomatic ties with Taiwan.

The measure of agreement that has already been reached became clear with the announcement in The People's Daily, which declared that Tanakt is coming to China to "negotiate and settle" the question of normalizing the relations between the two countries.

The announcement came at the end of a week of conflicting statements by prominent members of Tanaka's Liberal Democratic party, who appeared to have differing notions of the lengths to which their leader is prepared to go in securing good-neighborly relations with Peking.

Liverpool Rolls To Soccer Lead

LONDON (CP) — Liverpool rolled to the top of the English League soccer standings Saturday with a 5-0 victory over Sheffield United.

That was the signal for two more goals within five minutes. Fullback Alec Lindsay scored with a 25-yard shot and Steve Heighway made it 3-0 from a right-footed effort.

Liverpool sewed the result up with more goals in the 54th and 56th minute by Peter Macdougall and Kevin Keegan.

The result put the Merseyside squad in front of the First Division championship race with 14 points and a better goal average over Tottenham which beat West Ham 1-0 in an all-London game.

Tottenham continued its recent good run in a game which surprisingly resulted in only one goal from big Mike England.

The game was marred by fighting on the terraces and police moved in to make several arrests. There was similar trouble at several other games.

Indian Welfare Switch?

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government said Friday provincial governments may extend their welfare programs to include Indians.

However, both the provinces and Indian associations must be in agreement before the plan is implemented, says a news release issued by Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien and Health Minister John Munro.

Under the present system, Indian welfare assistance is administered by the federal government through provincial welfare departments and agencies. The new plan would reimburse provinces for such welfare service costs.

The program will be discussed among federal-provincial and Indian representatives.

ing to say in this election" Lewis declared. "The Tory party stands for the same things as the Liberals and they are having trouble finding an issue."

In Saskatchewan Friday Trudeau was greeted by large and enthusiastic crowds during his first two forays into Saskatchewan wheat country in the federal election campaign.

His only formal speech of the day was delivered at Swift Current where an estimated 3,000 persons were told that the government aims to export one billion bushels of prairie grain in the crop year which started Aug. 1.

But it was the open-hearted reception he received in this community of 1,200 in southwestern Saskatchewan that instilled hopes among Liberal campaign officials that the government will make gains in 1972 over its showing in 1968.

In Montreal, Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer declared that he is fed up with criticism of incentive grants to industry. The Trudeau government has created a million jobs, he asserted.

"I'm proud that we've invested more in Quebec than any other province in Canada because Quebec needs more than any other province."

Stanfield, at a Montreal news conference, sought to clarify his comments of the previous day, when he had said he would prohibit strikes in essential services. Stanfield told the news conference:

If inflation continues at its present rate, he said, by the end of the century a $25,000 house will cost $146,000, housewives will have to pay $1.65 for a quart of milk, and television sets will cost $2,500 each.

Ambulance Fee To Be Refunded

A Victoria ambulance firm has admitted its error in billing an elderly widow $20 for an emergency call and has assured city hall the money will be refunded immediately.

Mrs. Ethel Shaw, 1277 Rockland, complained to Ald. William Tindall Wednesday she was charged $20 by Garden City Ambulance for service for her late husband, Barclay Shaw, who died of a heart attack Jan. 15.

According to their contract with the city, the firm is not allowed to charge for ambulances dispatched by police in emergency situations.

Tindall said Friday he had met with Garden City Ambulance president J. R. Knezacky to review the records and Knezacky assured him Mrs. Shaw would get her $20 back.

Tindall said he accepted Knezacky's explanation that the billing was a "human error."

Gaglardi's 'Pork Barrel' PAB Disbanded, Staff Dismissed

The "pork barrel" Provincial Alliance of Businessmen will close down Oct. 31, Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi announced Friday.

Levi said in a brief press conference it was "absolutely intolerable" to continue an operation that has nothing to do with the rehabilitation department, but was run by the former minister alone.

That was Phil Gaglardi, who by order in council last June made an attempt to get the 26 PAB employees into the permanent civil service.

Levi said the status of these employees is "probationary."

He said he has written the civil service chairman asking to place any PAB employee in the permanent service "as he sees fit."

Pressed to discuss his feelings about the effectiveness and purpose of the PAB, Levi said, "Yes, it was a pork barrel — I said so during the election."

Social Credit government budgeted $500,000 for the 1972-73 operations of the PAB and by the end of this month, $150,000 will have been spent. The remaining money will be channeled into "more useful programs," Levi said.

The PAB was modelled after an organization created in the United States aimed at finding work for the hard-core unemployed.

Levi noted that the scheme was being worked out when he sat for his one previous session of the B.C. Legislature in 1969.

He said all the employees of the PAB were notified in advance of what he was announcing at the press conference.

"They are all being dismissed — they are not civil servants."

He said he did not want to comment on work done by the employees themselves, but would only refer to the conduct of the minister.

A particular problem associated with the PAB was that its employees got larger salaries than those in equivalent jobs in the rehabilitation department.

This "upset" people in the rehabilitation department, Levi said, "because they felt that where there was a political appointment it was much more advantageous."

The PAB has locked the government into leases, some until 1974, Levi said. Other under negotiations will be dropped.

Some of the office space already signed for may be worked into the needs of Levi's department, he said.

Of the PAB's work, Levi said, "I wasn't impressed with it and neither were my colleagues."

But he said he feels personally that there is "a place for a job-finding-agency.

Levi said there was never any attempt to find out how many of the jobs supposedly found for the unemployed by the PAB were permanent.

"I would venture to say there was very little permanence in the jobs," he said.

Levi said there was an order in council passed last June 13, in which the 26 PAB employees were joined to the permanent civil service.

This was an attempt to protect their jobs, but since they were still only probationary employees, none of the jobs is permanent.

West German Politicians Set for Campaign Trail

BONN (Reuter) — West Germany's political parties prepared for the campaign trail today with nothing to show that November's general elections will solve the issues which caused Friday's historic dissolution of parliament.

President Gustav Heinemann ordered the dissolution of the Bundestag—lower house—Friday night, only hours after Chancellor Willy Brandt's defeat in a confidence motion.

Heinemann set Nov. 19 as the date on which more than 40 million citizens will vote.

The president said the decision to disband the Bundestag a year before the normal four-year legislature period had run its course was unavoidable since neither side commanded an effective majority in the house.

Brandt put his unprecedented confidence motion to the Bundestag knowing he would lose. He and all but one of his cabinet withheld their votes, while Labor Minister Walter Arendt abstained.

The vote, preceded by 9½ hours of acrimonious debate, was a 248-to-233 defeat for the chancellor.

Hospital Worker Asks Board Fired

A spokesman for the B.C. Hospital Employees' Union said Friday the board of directors of Victoria General Hospital should be dismissed for interfering with a "competent administration."

Ray McCready, secretary of the union, said there has been "too much interference from the board of management" at Victoria General and that he has been made aware of developments over the past two months which included the resignation of Dr. E. G. Q. Van Tilburg as executive director.

McCready said the hospital board is not representative of the community. In many cases, he said, hospital trustees are appointed by the provincial government which he termed "straight political patronage."

Trustees should be elected to their positions as school trustees are, he said.

McCready said members of the union working at Victoria General "complain of fear and unrest, and as a result, there isn't going to be good patient care."

He said he hopes that a strong NDP administration would do away with hospital boards and give its own direction to hospital policy.

McCready said the election of the NDP and appointment of Health Minister Dennis Cocke will give hospital workers the opportunity to do the jobs they are trained to do.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 26-year-old Nanaimo man was fined $200 and placed on one year's probation for assault causing bodily harm by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Friday.

Robert Craig Frost pleaded guilty Sept. 6 to beating his wife Sept. 4 in a parking lot near Joseph Street causing multiple bruises, black eyes and swollen lips.

Ostler told Frost that he would have sentenced him to a term of incarceration when he first appeared Sept. 6.

"When I feel like that, I don't do it," said Ostler. So he remanded Frost to Firday to have a couple of weeks to consider the sentence.

He said he still felt Frost should go to jail but his wife was willing to forgive him.

"Unless you're willing to change your ways, I don't have much hope for your marriage," said Ostler.

Thomas John Wythe, 19, of an unknown address, was given a suspended sentence and placed on one year's probation for false pretences under $200 and attempted false pretences under $200.

Wythe pleaded guilty Sept. 11 to obtaining a shirt, a pair of pants and a pair of boots, valued at $38.89, from a downtown store by using another person's credit card Sept. 8.

He pleaded guilty the same day to attempting to purchase a knapsack valued at $45 and a sleeping bag worth $60 Sept. 9 using the same credit card.

Editor Fined

SAIGON (AP) — A Saigon newspaper editor who published excerpts from the Pentagon papers and a Cornell University study on United States bombing in Indochina been convicted by a military court of "confusing public opinion and harming national security."

It was the first trial resulting from President Nguyen Van Thieu's tough new press law.

A military court sentenced Vo Thi Suong, 27-year-old editor of the opposition daily Dien Tin, to one year in prison and a $2,500 fine. He has three days in which to appeal the decision to the supreme court, but the law requires him to pay the fine first.

The owner and publisher of Dien Tin, Senator Hong Son Dong, could not be prosecuted because of his senatorial immunity.

Now You See It . . .

It now appears that a recommendation that collective bargaining be employed by the provincial government in its dealings with the civil service was the major point of the Carrothers Report of 1959. This point, revealed by the new Barrett government, explains why the report was hustled onto a back shelf and kept secret from the public for 13 Social Credit years.

While urging extension of the usual form of labor negotiation to the government's employees, the report did not support the right of civil servants to strike. But there would be binding arbitration in cases where agreement between the two parties could not be reached.

It will be interesting to see how much of the Carrothers Report the NDP government will adopt. Collective bargaining, by civil servants as by any other employees, is strongly supported by Premier Barrett's party. But on the other hand, as Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall asserts, the right to strike is "sacrosanct" in his opinion. We may therefore expect to see a pick-and-choose approach by the government in regard to Professor Carrothers' recommendations.

The nature of the report's proposals raises interesting questions in regard to other government documents hitherto withheld from the public. There was the report of Dr. Neil Perry on the state of universities in the province. It was completed in 1969, but despite frequent demands for its release it is still in limbo. Perhaps it will now be swept into view by the new brooms in the Legislative Building.

It is a characteristic of aging regimes that they tend to keep more and more of the people's business secret. On the other hand, new governments — and particularly a successor of a different ideological background to that of the ex-administration — are usually eager to expose what the previous regime had kept hidden. In such a case, even if only part of a report is implemented, the government reaps the benefit of a reputation for open dealing and progressive policies.

In a sense, then, Mr. Bennett's government has left a situation which Mr. Barrett may turn to his own advantage. We may expect more disclosures of heretofore hidden information. The measure of the new government may perhaps be seen in the amount of material unfavorable to its own ideas which will be made public. For a while, at least, the people may gain a feeling of having some part in the governmental process — at least to the extent of knowing what's going on.

Energy and Pollution

The energy crisis is about to strike the industrial heartland of Canada, Ontario. In addition, the rising demands for power will be materially increased by the campaign to cut down pollution. This, in brief, is the message of Mr. Robert Hay, a member of Ontario's advisory committee on energy, speaking to the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association recently in Dryden, Ont.

Mr. Hay pointed out that Ontario imports 83 per cent of its energy requirements from the West and elsewhere and emphasized an ominous fear: "They're not finding more gas and oil in Alberta. The rate of discovery no longer matches the rate of increase in consumption." He predicted the blackouts, brownouts and shortages in the United States would come to central Canada. The only hope, he indicated, was the development of heavy water nuclear power systems, as at Pickering, near Toronto.

It is sobering to reflect on what a slowdown in economic growth in Ontario would mean to the rest of the country. And it is eye-opening to be told that the ecological crusade has an energy tag attached. Scepticism about nuclear energy for British Columbia will not lessen this province's awareness of the threat which has prompted Ontario to turn to fission, and to sound the call for what Mr. Hay calls "wisdom and swiftness" in rationalizing our dwindling energy supplies.

Pro Bono Publico

Conflict of interest seems to be an increasingly common concern in government. A dispatch from Ottawa reports the suspension for possible conflict of interest of two civil servants in the highly controversial Department of Regional Economic Expansion. These officials, whose names were not disclosed, may have profited from inside knowledge of a $737,000 incentive grant to Silver Shield Mines of Cobalt, Ont. The case is under investigation from within the department and by an outside firm of independent auditors.

The incident has prompted Tory industrial critic James McGrath, MP for St. John's East, to call for "an independent review by private auditors and management consultants in each case where a company is to receive a grant exceeding some specified amount." In addition, he thought civil servants in a position to know of grant offers should "file monthly statements of their personal financial dealings."

Certainly a tightening-up of regulations regarding conflict of interest at all government levels would do no harm. An area of public service is involved where both the fact of conflict and an appearance of it are equally to be considered. If strict controls and requirements encourage a greater confidence in public administrations, then no one should complain if these are imposed.

MAURICE WESTERN

Mr. Lewis and the Rainbow

OTTAWA — It has probably occurred to many people that if politicians were more frequently correct in their diagnoses, this country would be in far better shape.

A political diagnosis, in most cases, begins with a gleam of truth. This may, unfortunately, develop into a radiance which is dazzling while it lasts but, like most illusions, not very helpful to an expectant public.

The case of William Aberhart is an obvious illustration. No well-intentioned man ever raised higher public hopes. The gleam with which he started — surely it must be generally conceded now — was that in his time we were suffering from a shortage of purchasing power. From this, assisted by popularizers of Douglasite theories, he moved on to the grand illusion; the economy, through a quirk in the monetary system, failed consistently to generate purchasing power adequate in total to enable the public to buy back the goods it produced.

Scarce Supply

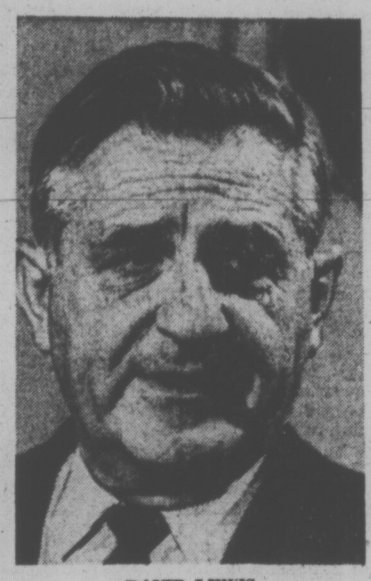

As the error, according to Mr. Aberhart, could be corrected — and without any social upheaval — many citizens were persuaded that he had found the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow — a remarkable achievement in the dirty 30s because even rainbows were in scarce supply. And why not? It followed from the diagnosis that we could all share in an economy providing full employment without inflation. With that central problem happily solved, we would all, of course, have been better off and accordingly much better able to tackle such other problems as have turned up since Mr. Aberhart's day.

The relevance of this somewhat distant example is that politicians continue discovering these pots of gold at each succeeding election. David Lewis is apparently the latest. While his vision lacks the grandeur of Aberhart's — the pot looks smaller and would probably be dissipated in short order if the NDP is seriously in the market for odds and ends like the Canadian Pacific Railway — at least he assures us that he has found a pot; a substantial one to judge by his speeches.

It is not difficult, it seems to me, to discern the gleam of truth that started Mr. Lewis on his way. There has been an indiscriminate use of subsidies, some probably unnecessary, to coax corporations into the establishmest of new plants to generate employment. The federal government has not been alone in these errors of judgement but it operates with greater resources than other governments and in any case we are in a federal election.

But Mr. Lewis has generalized the attack. The corporations, according to his theory, are not paying their way — aside from a few honorable exceptions like Electrohome. Thus we have only to follow the rainbow and we come to the pot of gold; a nice, large, untapped pool of tax revenue on which we can draw for the satisfaction of our unfilled needs. All this tapping will be without pain to hard-pressed middle income taxpayers whom the NDP has also, if rather belatedly, discovered.

The trouble with the argument as a whole is that it is much too good to be true. It can be assailed from a variety of points of view. For example, and regardless of errors which may have been made, there is certainly a case for incentives and we might lose more by withdrawing them than we could hope to gain.

DAVID LEWIS
. . . pots of gold

But surely there is a more basic point. Legally a corporation is a person and we are offered a comparison between the big bruiser, say Bell Canada or General Motors, and the ordinary taxpayer. The talk of a "rip-off" implies that the big bruisers get off lightly at our expense.

As it happens, however, the corporate big bruiser is largely fictitious. In public corporations ownership very often is highly diversified. If there are big shareholders, there are also thousands—sometimes tens or hundreds of thousands—of small ones. In recent years a great many people of modest means have been tempted to buy stocks as a hedge against inflation.

If Mr. Lewis is going to soak the corporations, it would thus appear that the middle-income taxpayer is going to get it once again.

In fact there is a wider objection and it can be found in the Carter report. Mr. Lewis may find this distressing because the NDP were particularly stout Carterites, much preferring the original report on tax reform to the watered and re-watered proposals finally accepted by Mr. Benson.

It may be noted first that the complaint voiced by Mr. Lewis about the increasing percentage of federal revenue coming from personal, as opposed, to corporation tax is a bit odd in this context. What has been happening is what the Carter commission recommended: more income tax in the revenue mix.

But the second and more important Carter finding was that taxes imposed on corporations tend to be passed on through cost-cutting or price-hiking to the general public. Not all corporations are in the same position; some can shift more fully and quickly than others. But the opportunities may be greater now than in Carter's time since inflation is more general.

Middle Income Earner

For obvious reasons rising prices have a particularly cruel impact on persons of low incomes. But the more diversified they are — and diversification would be ensured by a general squeeze on corporations — the greater the absolute price imposed on people in the middle range, who tend to pay out more for a greater variety of products.

This is very disheartening. It might appear at first glance that Mr. Lewis has discovered, in what he calls the "rip-off", a means of saving the ordinary taxpayer at the expense of the big bruisers. Behind the NDP illusion, however, is the flesh and blood figure of that sterling citizen, the middle income earner. As usual he is the target — and as usual, unidentified either as saver, if he has managed to invest in a few shares, or as consumer, or in both roles.

As compared to the late Mr. Aberhart, Mr. Lewis may have aroused only minimal hopes because the middle income group have not generally tended to regard the NDP as the answer to tax payers. Even so it is a depressing business. Anyone would welcome a tax cut if there was some assurance that we would not have to pay for it, as normally happens, in higher prices. It would be pleasant, for once, to have a genuine discovery at the foot of some political rainbow.

TOM WICKER

The Case of 'Bomber' Lavelle

WASHINGTON — Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi is not likely to be elected Man of the Year by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, but he may be the ideal person to investigate the strange case of Gen. John P. Lavelle and the unauthorized bombing of North Vietnam.

Not only is the Senator a man of unquestioned personal integrity and one of those Southern patriarchs who commands exceptional respect in the Senate; he also has been active and effective for so long as a member of the Armed Services Committee that he knows as well as any man can where the bodies are buried in the Pentagon and the boondoggles are buried in the defence budget.

It is therefore a warning signal as loud and clear as a fire siren that Stennis has refused to commit himself to approval of Gen. Creighton W. Abrams as Army Chief of Staff, and that he remarked the other day that "there is just something that sticks out here . . . I just do not see how (Gen. Lavelle) could, on his own . . . have launched out on plans like this."

Damage Done

Indeed, there is something "that sticks out here." It is the damage done to military discipline, civilian control of the military, and the nation's position as a law-abiding power. Although the dimensions of the Lavelle affair are not yet clear, all three of these concepts appear to have been outraged by it; they now must be added to the endless casualty list of this longest and most dubious war in American history.

That is so whether or not Lavelle is vindicated in his contention that his superiors — specifically, Abrams and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer — knew and approved of the secret raids that were described officially as "protective reaction."

If they did not know, and Lavelle is proved to have been acting on his own, that would be at the least a grievious breakdown of discipline, one tending to bring the nation into disrepute and to disrupt its diplomatic undertakings. Moreover, as Stennis noted, at least once Lavelle and Abrams were "corrected" from Washington for a raid the Joint Chiefs said had been improper and unauthorized — but nothing else was done for two more months while many other improper raids were launched and then only to Lavelle, who at that was allowed to retire at a virtually tax-free $25,000 annually. Some punishment!

But if Lavelle's superiors were aware of, or encouraging, the secret raids, something more than a mere breakdown of military discipline — bad as that is —

SENATOR STENNIS

is suggested. There seem to be two possibilities. One is a military conspiracy to sabotage, or at least run in defiance of, national policy. The other is that — generals not being notorious for sticking their necks out — the whole episode might have been known to the supposed civilian masters of the Armed Forces, or to some of them. It may seem extraordinary to suppose that the Administration or any of its officials could play such a deceptive game, but the history of this war is replete with extraordinary deceptions by American officials.

Whatever the facts finally show, the Lavelle affair raises in the sharpest way the question why either the civilian or the military spokesmen of this administration should be accepted at the face value when they say that American planes are not bombing the Red River dike system in North Vietnam. The unauthorized raids of last winter and spring show all too well that these spokesmen could either be misinforming or misinformed.

Even Less Reason

Even more clearly, the Lavelle affair suggests that Hanoi has even less reason than the American people to trust official American statements. They knew that those "protective reaction" raids were no such thing, and in violation of the so-called "understanding" by which President Johnson had stopped the bombing in 1968.

The worst of all this may be the way it is being handled in this country. If Lavelle were solely responsible, he ought to have been severely punished; but he was not, certainly not by comparison to what happens to any ordinary person convicted of, say, assault or armed robbery. If his military superiors were implicated with him, the most sweeping penalties ought to be invoked all along the line; but Abrams is being nominated for the highest army post, Senators are falling over one another to pledge him their support, and other than some members of the Senate Committee, no one — certainly not the White House or the Pentagon — seems exercised over the matter.

Thus, the moral rot of the Vietnam war continues to foul institutions and processes — let alone men — of which Americans once were justly proud. How can anyone contend that there ever was anything to be gained in Indochina remotely worth the values and the honor the nation has lost in this corrupting war?

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

Go out to Matheson Lake Park, just off the Rocky Point Road at Metchosin, for a delightful outing.

On your way you drive through a very peaceful pastoral setting, a luxurious green growth of meadows and pastures with contented cattle, which takes you away from the rush of urban traffic.

When you get to the parking lot, follow the trail to the lake. It is quiet, the water glistening in the sun, and down the lake there is a small island which makes the scene more attractive.

On the eastern side the steep, rocky hill is covered with a growth of Douglas fir and it is intermingled with some very fine maples. They look as though they had been planted in rows because of the pockets of soil that have filled the small depressions where the trees could find a footing.

The cliffs come down to the water's edge and a scramble along this side can be quite exciting and rewarding for there are very many kinds of mosses and lichens, and in the spring a great variety of flowers bloom.

On the western side there is a flat where a fine stand of old red cedars is growing and a small bay with a bountiful growth of water plants. Here several kinds of water birds find sanctuary and build their nests. At times a loon may be seen swimming in this locality.

This is a delightful spot for a quiet picnic and the water is fit to drink. You can see an old log jutting into the lake and on it there are shrubs and trees. It is creating a new piece of land for the future.

At the foot of the lake there is an old trail that would lead you out to Roch Cove, though the going is rather rough, climbing over old downed logs and a lush growth of underbrush.

At the top of the lake there is a small beach made by the Provincial Park Branch; here one can sit in the sun and enjoy life. There used to be an old house here and one can still see that it had been a home for there are several plants of the garden variety such as the laburnum, and even daffodils in the spring.

While you are there take a good look at the very old Douglas firs — they are knotty, twisted and gnarled, with their branches forming many shapes. You can spot signs of the fungus that is called "conk" which makes these trees unfit for lumber — thank goodness.

These effects are due to the rather poor type of soil and the persistent westerly winds during the winter months.

No power boats are allowed on the lake. There are toilet facilities available. This little park comes under the control of the Provincial Parks Branch which has done a wonderful job here. This is a green gem in our green belt.

The Family Doctor: Lost in Medicine's Progress

"I got carried away," half-apologized Health Minister Richard Potter, after he had bluntly denounced the reliance of many modern doctors on tests and pills; but there will be a good many patients who will feel that he spoke the simple truth.

Such patients have begun to feel that the precious — and it is precious — doctor-patient relationship has vanished completely, to be replaced by the tests and pills mentioned by Dr. Potter.

He was speaking to medical educators from 16 Latin and North American countries; and he wasn't flattering: "I sometimes wonder about the medical students being graduated by our medical schools . . . I question if it takes six, eight or 10 years at a cost to the public of up to $100,000 to do no more than graduate clinical clerks."

He said he was concerned when he went around hospitals, noted a diagnosis of abdominal pain "and then see every damn test ordered for the patient. It isn't necessary for a doctor to order all the tests in the book, then have them interpreted for him and then prescribe a pill produced by a pharmaceutical house that has brainwashed him into using it by providing it free . . . I question the quality of the pharmacology taught in medical school . . . As medical educators," he told his audience, "your responsibility is to mold the doctors of tomorrow. You need not only use research, but foresight and vision."

Nobody, and probably least of all Dr. Potter, is going to deny the immense value of the gifts which medical research has handed doctor and patient in the past few years, and continues to hand them.

But it is possible that the very immensity of this new wealth has turned the attention of many doctors away from equally important things: the fruits of clinical experience which can be confirmed by tests but which cannot be superseded by them; the intimate knowledge by a doctor of his patient — a knowledge which comprises not only the whole body of the patient, but his personality and how that is affected (and in turn affects his body) by his family and his job and the world in which he has to live.

Human beings can be aided by the computer but they cannot be computerized, because every single one of the millions of human beings on this planet is an individual with differences from other individuals.

The tests may find some of his symptoms, the pills may treat some of his symptoms; but how often will they miss the problems that cause the symptoms?

Research has recognized this, in its distant laboratory way; it has said that the tensions to which modern industrialized man is subjected are the root causes of many of his physical difficulties; it has recognized that modern transportation, congested modern living, the convenience of modern packaged food have to some extent divided human beings from the bases of good health: physical exercise, sufficient sleep, a balanced diet.

But who is to look at the whole patient, within his whole environment, and say, I can help you with pills or with surgery, but what you need as well or instead is a new life style, removal of the things that cause your tensions, or a coming to terms with them, the proper fuel for your body (and not a snatched sandwich and coffee), the right hours of sleep for the particular individual you are (and that may not be eight hours, but six or 10), the kind of exercise that keeps your muscles in tone, your vital organs functioning energetically, your mind assuaged?

Some doctors still do it, and lucky are the patients who find them. But what the masses of patients still need — in addition to the modern miracles of surgery and drugs — is the old family doctor; or his modern substitute.

We need much more deliberate attempts (attempts are being made) to re-establish and enlarge family practice, to bring the human practitioner into fuller contact with the human patient.

This may take the form of group practice — where there is a doctor to whom the patient can relate, but who is backed by a group of experts that is a team, not a bunch of individuals dividing the body of the patient among them.

It may take the form of clinics, where there is the same focal personal relationship.

It may take the form of assistant-physician practitioners, working in the community and knowing the patients and directing them to the specialists they need.

It will probably take all of these, and more.

Dr. Potter is a general practitioner himself, a family doctor. His words touched a responsive chord in many patients. They know that never before has there been so much medical expertise to come to their aid.

They also know that they want — and how deeply want it — a doctor who knows them, cares about them, and whom they trust.

Consider . . . the Flea

By JANE E. BRODY

NEW YORK — For most people, fleas have little to recommend them — they bite and bother, spread ghastly diseases and give the unwary host a bad reputation.

But scientists have always been fascinated by the remarkable jumping ability of this tiny, wingless, blood-thirsty pest. The leap of a human flea, for instance, can carry it nearly 8 inches into the air and across a distance of 13 inches.

Size for size an equivalent jump for a man would propel him 275 feet up and set him down 450 feet from where he started.

Now an international team of biologists has disclosed through painstaking study most of the secrets of the flea's jumping talents — which, incidentally, enable it to reach almost any host, even though some, from the flea's perspective, are rather high off the ground.

The scientists found that unlike man and most other animals, the flea, which ranges in size from one-thirty-second of an inch to three-eights of an inch, does not rely on muscular strength to fling itself into the air. Rather, it depends on the springlike rebound energy in an untiring elastic protein called resilin that is peculiar to insects.

By releasing an elaborate system of trigger catches that otherwise hold the resilin in a compressed, energy-laden form, the flea can unleash the stored energy at will and leap out of reach of a scratching finger or paw.

The scientists' report, published in the current issue of the British journal Nature, describes their careful re-examination of the makeup of the Oriental rat flea (spreader of typhus and bubonic plague), combined with a frame-by-frame analysis of high-speed film of a flea jumping.

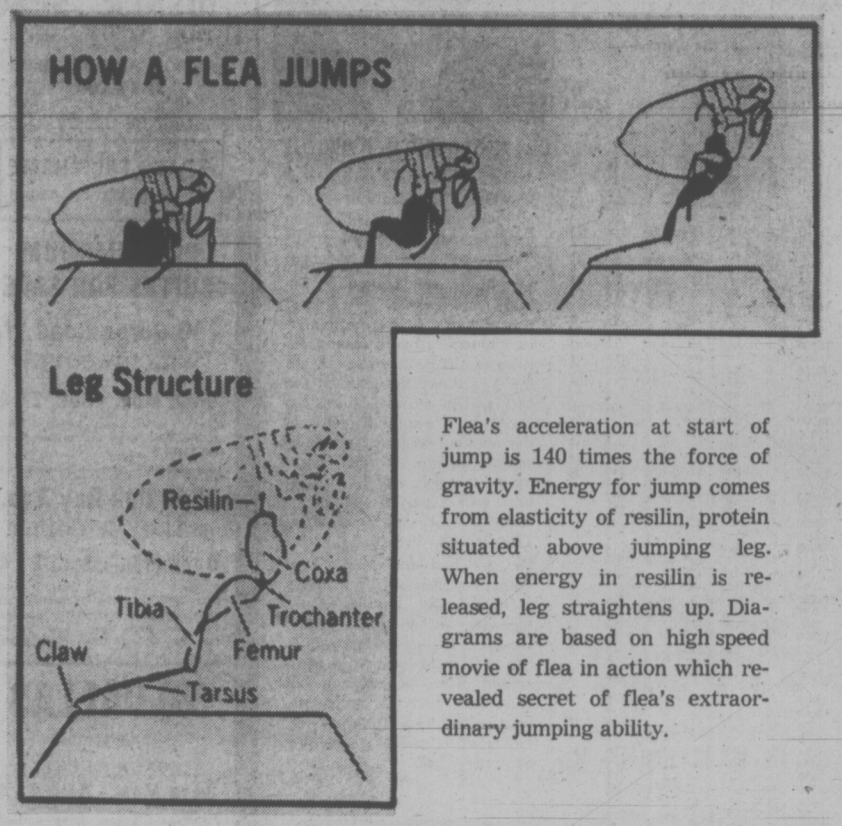

The film study disclosed that this flea takes off with an acceleration of 140 times the force of gravity, which is 14 times the acceleration that would cause a man to black out.

The research team, consisting of the English biologists, Miriam Rothschild (a lifelong student of fleas) and K. Parker, and two Israelis, Y. Schlein and S. Sternberg, outlined the jumping mechanism as follows:

Housed in an arch above the third pair of legs (the jumping legs) is the rubberlike resilin, a substance that in winged insects permits wing movements far more rapid than any muscle ever could. The resilin is compressed by several muscles and held by series of catches, placing the flea in a crouched position "cocked" for takeoff.

The jump begins with the simultaneous relaxation of the muscles that hold the catches and the muscle that holds the femur (the third segment of the insect leg) in the bent resting position. The spring of the resilin pushes the trochanter (the second leg segment) against the surface, the femur is lowered and the insect catapulted into the air.

The New York Times

Flea's acceleration at start of jump is 140 times the force of gravity. Energy for jump comes from elasticity of resilin, protein situated above jumping leg. When energy in resilin is released, leg straightens up. Diagrams are based on high speed movie of flea in action which revealed secret of flea's extraordinary jumping ability.

ON VIOLENCE

By ANTHONY LEWIS

"Violence, less and less embarrassed by the limits imposed by centuries of lawfulness, is brazenly and victoriously striding across the whole world. The world is being inundated by the brazen conviction that power can do anything, justice nothing."

Alexander Solzhenitsyn's words, in his undelivered Nobel Prize lecture, expressed the anxiety of civilized beings everywhere. A day hardly passes, we feel, without some new threat to the ordered peace that makes life bearable. We sense a society at risk from terrorists, hijackers, assassins — creatures beyond the familiar restraints of reason and humanity.

But Solzhenitsyn was not talking only of the violence of anti-social fanatics. He has himself been a victim of something just as dangerous: the violence of the state. It is indeed more sinister, because more corrupting.

One of the most terrible facts of this age is the evidence that we are becoming more tolerant of official violence. There are signs of that deadly social illness right across the developed world.

A current example, an especially painful one, is provided by the report of the official commission on the Attica New York, prison rebellion and its suppression a year ago. The report makes clear beyond argument that law enforcement officers fired hundreds of rounds without warning that day, at men who had no guns. It makes clear the heavy responsibility of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller in the massacre that resulted. It makes clear that official accounts of the events were lies.

In a society that gave due value to personal courage and honor in its leaders, Rockefeller would have returned to private life; those who wantonly caused death in the name of the state would be called to legal account.

What is happening in fact? The commission of eminent men who made the Attica report is itself being investigated by a prosecutor. It is most unlikely that any official will ever face legal action, or even public shame. Those who want the responsibility for that day at Attica brought home will have to look to some higher power than the conscience of the State of New York.

The official argument is always that such action was necessary to counter grave risks to society. Undoubtedly the provocation at Attica as after Munich was extreme. No commentator, after the fact, should underestimate the strain on those forced to decide how to save a group of hostages. No one should mistake determination of Jews in Israel not to let themselves be destroyed in this generation. But can it really help to take action that almost inevitably will kill the innocent along with the guilty?

Solzhenitsyn, after all, asks us to meet violence not with violence but with justice. That is a heavy demand, in an age of frustration and terror, but it is the price of civilization. For the state to do otherwise — to use its greater power wantonly or outside the law — is to put the whole idea of ordered liberty at risk.

Does Chartrand Speak For Labor on Israel?

THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS
(An Editorial)

One is tempted to dismiss Michel Chartrand as just another bigot whose intemperate language and wild accusations confirm his prejudice against Israel and all that the Jewish state stands for.

But Chartrand is a labor leader in Montreal, the president of the Montreal Council of the Confederation of National Trades Unions, and as such his views cannot be shrugged off as simply those of an irrational individual regurgitating his verbal bile.

Chartrand returned recently from a tour of the Middle East — a tour in which Israel was deliberately bypassed — at the head of a party of 10 Montreal union officials. He told The Canadian Jewish News that Israel is acting towards the Palestinians the way Hitler treated the Jews, that all who support Israel are war criminals and should be punished as such.

His ravings were before Munich, but what did he say after Munich when CBC radio made the mistake of giving him several minutes of air time? This self-styled apostle of the underdog called the Arab terrorists heroes and martyrs and he denounced the press for distorting what happened. Not a single word of regret for the slaughter of the innocents, not a single word of criticism for those who carried out the foul act.

The Jewish community in Montreal, in fact, Jews everywhere, would like very much to know whether the Chartrand view of the Middle East is one shared by the 10 Montreal union officials. They have been silent, as far as we know, and it is time they declared themselves. If they believe as their leader does, the Jewish community is entitled to know. If Chartrand's scandalous diatribe runs counter to their views, they should lose no time in disassociating themselves from this individual who masquerades as a responsible human being.

The Canadian trade union movement has always been remarkably free of religious or racial prejudice, at least of major dimensions. Wherever men came together in large numbers, there will be those whose views run counter to the fellowship of the movement itself. It is not enough to say Chartrand is what he is and should not be taken seriously. The CNTU should take a look to see how far his sickness has penetrated the labour movement.

Chartrand and his colleagues paid their own way to the Middle East. What they got in return for the outlay was a propaganda teach-in conducted by Israel's foes, including Al Fatah leaders.

The murder of the Israeli sportsmen was plotted and carried out by gangsters who were given sanctuary in the lands visited by Chartrand and his followers.

Today's Guest: The Man You Just Love to Hate

RUSSELL BAKER

WASHINGTON — This is Phil Chivy, America, and as a public service to the nation in this vital Presidential election campaign, this noisecaster will periodically present interviews with the indispensable men who make government and politics in American, the great farce we have all learned to love to sneer at.

Today's guest: a man without whom scarcely a politician in America would be able to inflame and embitter us all. How do you do, sir. It's a pleasure to have you with us today. Would you identify yourself for the millions who have to work hard and pay taxes so they can enjoy the pleasure of having you, sir, to hate?

Answer: Yes, of course. Delighted to, Phil. I am the bum on welfare.

Q. It's good of you to come by today.

A. Not at all. I happened to be in town for a few days with nothing to do, and since you've got plenty of free parking space for my Cadillac here behind the studio, it seemed like it would be a painless way to spend a litttle idle time.

Q. You've been out of town then?

A. Just up to Maine for the summer months. It's a little early yet for Jamaica.

Q. Being on welfare must be just one long vacation. Don't you ever get tired of it?

A. Frankly, it's exhausting. I wouldn't wish it on my worst enemy. If you're not down at the new-car dealer paying top dollar for this year's Cadillac, you're fighting the airline reservations people for first-class tickets to Jamaica. And what do you have to show for it but the hate of the hard-working taxpayer?

Q. True, but it must be extremely gratifying to you to realize that that hate is helping thousands of hard-campaigning politicians rise to the top of their profession.

A. Well, without being immodest about it, I would have to say that I sometimes feel mighty proud of the service I perform for the men who labor so hard to bring out the worst in our country.

Q. How did you become the bum on welfare, sir? Did you major in it at college?

A. It just came naturally, Phil. You see, I was one of them.

Q. Really? One of them? That's disgusting.

A. Exactly. And we all know who They are.

Q. I'm sure we all know who They are, but for the benefit of any newcomers in America who may be listening, why don't you just tell us who They are?

A. Well, frankly, Phil, now that you ask me, I really don't know who They are, but whoever They are, They are the reason for the trouble.

Q. Do you believe They are related to Those Who?

A. I rather doubt it. Those Who, you see, are the crowd that is always saying America is no good, thus forcing President Nixon to defend America, even at the risk of his political career.

Q. As the bum on welfare you must sometimes have moments when your conscience bothers you. How do you feel right now, for example, when you have to face somebody like me?

A. A good person, you mean?

Q. Right! A great human being. A hard-working American. The truly splendid sort of person whom America is all about. How can you sit there and look me straight in the eye?

A. I had special training for it, Phil.

Q. Fascinating! Then you did have some special vocational instruction?

A. Yes, I attended the Academy of Political Quackdoodle and Small Fraud. There they taught me to look really marvelous human beings like yourself right in the eye, so that you would want to kill me.

Q. And a good job they did too! I want to kill you right now.

A. You see, Phil, that's because I am making you feel more and more wonderful for being the kind of person who works hard to support a bum like me. You should now be eager to vote for the first politician who promises to starve me to death.

Q. You're right, you welfare bum! I want to see you suffer. How do you feel, knowing what a good person like me thinks of scum like yourself?

A. Really great, Phil! Really great! I think I've got you all ready to vote for the program everybody's running on this year — twice as much meanness-of-spirit! You can go ahead and shoot me if you like.

Q. I don't think I could do that.

A. Oh, go ahead, it's all right. I'm not real, you see.

Q. Terrific, ladies and gentlemen! The bum on welfare! The man you love yourself for hating! Only in America!

• YOUR TAXES •

By I. H. ASPER

One of the most commendable improvements instituted by the federal government in the operation of the revenue department in the last few years has been the publication of regular information circulars and interpretation bulletins.

These circulars and bulletins are available to all taxpayers and are intended to inform the public and its tax advisers on what is happening in the tax department generally and, more specifically, clarify and explain exactly how the officials intend to administer and enforce the complex tax laws.

To take a fictitious example, the statute law may say that all "reasonable" entertainment expenses for promoting one's business may be claimed as a business deduction. The tax division may then issue an interpretation bulletin defining what it will consider "reasonable" in giving circumstances.

The taxpayer may not agree with the department's interpretation and he's free to challenge it in the courts. But it has never been thought that the government would unilaterally and summarily dispute its own rulings. While it has always been known that these departmental rulings do not have the force of law, it has always been assumed that the government would not issue tax assessments that violate its own intent and interpretation of the law.

This system, whereby taxpayers and their advisers could obtain advance rulings for their specific situation or rely in general on the government rulings in planning their tax affairs has been dealt a serious body blow by a recent decision of the new federal court.

While there is little doubt that the court reached the correct legal decision, the practical results that flow from that decision are highly undesirable and call for quick remedy by Parliament.

The facts of the case before the court were quite elementary, arising from the 1962 treaty between Canada and the United States, governing the taxability of teachers who go from one country to the other to accept short-term teaching assignments.

During the early 1960s it was considered desirable to encourage teachers and professors from many countries, including Canada, to travel and teach in countries other than their homeland in order to broaden the base and background of the educational talent pool.

In order to reduce the tax complexity for these temporary residents, several countries enacted treaties providing that the host country would levy no tax on the income they earned during their stay, leaving their country of origin to tax them as they were still resident in their homeland.

Canada negotiated a number of such treaties. The one under review in the present case was that concluded between Canada and the United States. It provides that where an American professor temporarily visits Canada for the purpose of teaching at a university or similar institution, for a period not exeeding two years, Canada will not tax his earnings during that period. Presumably, he will account to the American tax authorities.

Shortly after the system was in full operation, it was discovered that in many cases, although the visiting teacher had intended only a two-year stay, he would like Canada and stay on permanently. The tax question was what do you do about the two-year tax freeze he's had if he subsequently decides to stay here.

It was decided that it was simply too complex to retroactively tax him and expect him to go back to his country of origin to try to negotiate a refund. As a result, the department of national revenue issued information bulletin No. 41 in May, 1968, which stated that where the teacher remains in Canada after the two-year tax-exempt period, he will retain his two-year tax-exempt status and pay tax in Canada only on his subsequent earnings.

The tax on the first two year's earnings is a matter between him and his home government.

In the case before the court, the facts were that an American professor had signed on at the University of Alberta for exactly two years. After the two years, during which he paid some Canadian tax because he was unaware of his rights, he stayed on about nine months before he left to return to the United States.

Because he stayed past the two-year limit, the Canadian government assessed him full tax on the earnings for the otherwise tax-exempt two-year period. He objected. It was conceded that Canada could do this under the terms of the Canada-U.S. tax convention, but the taxpayer pointed to Canadian information Bulletin 41 which explicitly covered and exempted his case.

The court ruled that the interpretation by the government of the law as set out in Bulletin 41 was wrong and even though the taxpayers had relied upon the tax department's ruling, the court's interpretation of the law, and not that of the tax department was what determined events. Thus, notwithstanding the tax department's written guideline to the contrary, he had to pay the tax.

The court even went so far as to overrule a recent tax review board decision which said that in a case where a taxpayer had gone to the department, disclosed his plans and received a tax clearance, the revenue department could not later change its mind and assess tax in violation of its own advance ruling.

The federal court has decided that no matter what ruling and advice the tax authorities give the public, even if taxpayers act on those guidelines, the department is still free subsequently to change its mind.

This is indeed a sorry state of affairs. While the court is quite right in saying that only Parliament can make the law and only the courts can give binding interpretations of it, this severely weakens the reliability of any guidelines and interpretations given taxpayers by government officials, since they are free to retroactively upset their own rulings.

In his budget address of May 8, Finance Minister John Turner pledged that he would continue his search for means of improving the newly-reformed tax system. Clearly one concept requiring early attention is a provision that makes departmental rulings binding on the government. Otherwise, the thousands of Canadians who annually arrange their affairs to comply with these rulings are placed in unwarranted jeopardy.

Hoopla Greets 'Gracious' Bob Fischer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Fischer's official city hall welcome to New York City had all the trappings of a political rally—including "Bobby for President" buttons.

A choir sang In Excelsis Deo. A U.S. Coast Guard band played a spunky tune, familiar at this year's Republican convention. And Fischer arrived early—instead of late—wreathed in smiles and wearing a maroon suit.

He strode past the red, white and blue bunting and the American flags—past a crowd of cheering fans and up the steps of city hall. A huge banner read: "Welcome Bobby Fischer, World's Chess Champion."

Fischer's controversial behavior in Iceland during his chess match with Boris Spassky once brought grumbles. But on Friday there was another Fischer, articulate, patient, and gracious.

Fischer smiled and signed autographs on wooden chess sets, crunched-up pieces of paper, hotel stationery, due bills, and address books.

Mayor John Lindsay presented Fischer with a gold medal and a scrapbook of press clippings. "I never thought the day would come when chess would be all over the front pages of newspapers here, and only one paragraph in Pravda," Fischer said in a short speech.

Fischer said he has no future plans. For now, he is staying with friend Paul Marshall. Marshall has a guard in front of the house and has so far beeen successful fending off Fischer fans.

VANCOUVER — A recount of ballots cast in Vancouver-Little Mountain riding in the Aug. 30 provincial election began Friday at the request of defeated Social Credit candidates Grace McCarthy and Leslie Peterson. After the first count of the 57,000 votes cast on Aug. 30, Roy Cummings and Phyllis Young of the New Democratic Party were declared winners with 11,165 and 11,217 votes respectively. Mrs. McCarthy, former minister without portfolio in the Social Credit government, had 10,622, and former Attorney-General Peterson had 10,684.

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI Friday asked Itqly to abolish its 21-month-old divorce law. The Pope made the appeal as Italian president Giovanni Leone made a state visit to the Vatican.

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — Gas station attendant Steve Force told police a man drove into his station, bought $2 worth of gas and said he had forgotten his wallet. The man said he would return home for the money and left his passenger for security. Force is still waiting. The passenger left at the station for security turned out to be a hitchhiker who had no idea who was driving the car.

NEW YORK — Sargent Shriver, the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, campaigned at a Bronx supermarket Friday and talked about prices with a woman shopper. "Some items are up 100 per cent — like bacon," he said. The woman looked confused and said she didn't know anything about bacon. Shriver later learned that the woman waes the wife of a rabbi.

OTTAWA — The Progressive Conservative party received a setback in its quest to win the Quebec riding of Pontiac in the the Oct. 30 federal election. Their chosen candidate refused to run. Serve Sauve, a 27-year-old Hull notary, declined the nomination becauseo f lack of experience, a Conservative spokesman said. Sauve had been chosen Thursday night by a meeting of top area Conservatives. Regeional organizer Levis Larocque said the party is bypassing regular nominating meetings in some ridings and allowing candidates to be invited if there is a consensus in their favor among local party activitists.

DOVER, England — A British clergyman who said God had instructed him to swim the English Channel to France gave up his attempt after three hours Friday. He was too cold. Rev. Richard Vick, 48, abandoned his sponsored bid seven miles from his start in this south England port. He had hoped to raise about $6,250 to repair his parish church. He said: "I had the faith and the stamina but the cold was too much for me. But it was not bad for my first attempt. I'll be back next year to try again."

SAN FRANCISCO — The University of California regents Friday refused to consider re-hiring Angela Davis as a pholosphy instructor, the board's chairman said. Dean Watkins told a news conference after the board met in closed session that the question of Miss Davis's rehiring was raised by the administration of UCLA. Miss Davis is a Communist party member who was an acting assistant professor for one year until her contract was terminated by the regents in June, 1970. After her dismissal, Miss Davis was charged with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy stemming from the August, 1970, Marin County Courthouse escape attempt in which four men died. She was acquited of all charges last June 4.

BUENOS AIRES — Suppoeters of former dictator Juan Peron are negotiating with Alitalia Airlines to charter a plane to return him home from exile in October or November, an airline's spokesman said Friday. The charter would cost at least $70,000, he said. Peron, now in exile in Madrid, has been nominated for president by Argentina's Justicialista party, although the military government has forbidden him to run.

AUTOMATED TEST SET FOR DRUGS

Times Ortawa Bureau

OTTAWA — New federal drug testing laboratories will be officially opened in Toronto on Mondqy by Health Minister John Munro.

The automated drug monitoring laborities will increase the capability of his department's health protection branch to test drugs available to Canadian consumers, said the minister Friday.

They will play a major role in the analytical portion of the drug quality assurance program now carried on by the federal department.

In May a year ago, Munro announced increased expenditures of $2,350,000 for the drug quality assurance program.

These additional funds have allowed for an extension of the department's prgram. At the same time they help toward the government's goal of reducing the cost of drugs to the public. The new laboratories are located in the Toronto regional office of the health protection branch.

They have been especially set up and equipped to conduct large scale analyses of drug products.

The highly automated facilities will be able to test and analyse specimens obtained for identity, potency, content uniformity, weight variations and disintegration time.

Other aspects of the drug quality assurance program include inspection of manufacturing facilitiees, assessment of efficacy and the publication of results, including informing the public.

Evil Spirits Exist, Says Church Leader

He is 52, considers himself a conservative theologically, and is moderator of the 183,000 member Presbyterian Church in Canada.

He also is a firm believer in the power of evil spirits. He not only is convinced of the existence of these dark powers, but feels he has run into them in his ministry.

"I've been called on two or three occasions into situations where an evil spirit is in possession of a life," he said in a recent interview. "One was in a house. The family called a professing Christian."

me. The person, a male, was

He was convinced that the man was possessed by a spirit "because there was a strong desire to take his life; he knew this was happenning."

"I believe that . . . the spirit lay hold on this person."

Dr. Putnam prayed over the man and talked to him for two hours. Victory came, Dr. Putnam said, through the name of Jesus and the blood of Christ:

"In the name of Jesus Christ, come out of this man. I implore you by the blood of Christ."

"I had a call later, saying that the most amazing peace had come into the life of this man.

"I went back the next day and talked about it. The person admitted he was in the power of something he knew was evil, stronger than he was.

"Since that time he has been in fairly normal spiritual health."

NATO Canadians 'Recover Remarkably'

TROMSO, Norway (CP) — Canadian forces involved in a major NATO exercise deep in the Norwegian Arctic have gained high praise from an unexpected quarter after suffering a serious initial setback.

About 1,000 troops mainly from the 3rd Battalion Royal Canadian Regiment in Petawawa, Ont., were part of a 5,000-man NATO contingent defending a 2,000-square-mile area against a simulated enemy assault.

The initial attack on the Canadian area, by units of the enemy forces represented by 4,000 Norwegian troops, was made from small amphibious landings on the north and east.

The Canadians were taken by complete surprise from the north and the commanding officer, Lt.-Col. S. W. Spencer, had to be informed by the exercise's central organizing agency that the enemy was within 1.5 miles of the battalion's headquarters.

But at a later briefing session, the commander of the enemy forces, Norwegian Col. Leif Lundesgaard, singled out the RCRs as worthy of "the highest commendation."

He said there seemed to have been "some sort of mix-up in the Canadian camp" at the time of the original attack. "But they recovered remarkably. We have learned a great deal about advanced offensive and defensive tactics from our encounters with the Canadians."

A Danish officer, however, commented that he had been "genuinely disappointed in the Canadians."

He said they should have paid closer attention to their northern flank. "It's not enough to watchjust one position."

The exercise, known as Strong Express, began Sept. 11. The troops begin their return home this weekend.

'New Order' Needed In Nation's Classrooms

WINNIPEG (CP) — The new president of the Canadian Education Association said Friday the country's educational system should return to traditions of discipline and order in the classroom.

Dr. H. M. Nason of Halifax, deputy minister in the Nova Scotia department of education, said in an interview that the new freedoms granted to students in recent years have perhaps been extended too far.

"Freedom has little meaning if it is not tempered with discipline," he said on the final day of the association's annual meeting.

From the reaction of delegates to talks and discussions during the conventions, "I detect a feeling we should return to more traditional approaches in education."

In his address to the convention, Dr. Nason said persons involved in education must seek "to accomplish a successful synthesis between freedom and control in matters ranging all the way from the national level to the level of the individual school and classroom."

He said the time has come "to exercise more moral fibre."

BLACK MAGIC BEWITCHES BASQUE

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (UPI) — The Basque region has long been famous for its witches, but this week the Basque resort of San Sebastian has more broomsticks than ever before.

The National Congress of Witchcraft opened Thursday.

More than 400 specialists in witchcraft from all over Spain attended the congress which consisted of three days of lectures, films, discussions and exhibitions.

"All the lecturers are academics or doctors and the purpose of the congress is to further the scientific examination of witchcraft in Spain," said organizer Carlos Blasco.

"Already so much interest has been aroused abroad that we have received a flood of mail, telegrams and phone calls from many European towns and cities and places in Asia and South America. So next year we shall turn it into an international congress," he said.

High point of the three-day event was to have been a black mass celebrated today at Zugarramurdi in Navarre, at a place called "The Field of the Male Goat."

"The male goat is a witch symbol and the spot in Navarre has been famous since the 16th century as a place where witches came from all over Europe to celebrate the witches sabbath," Blasco said.

"Such occasions later gave rise to fierce persecution of witches during the Spanish inquisition and the famous witch trials of Bordeaux," he said.

The Spanish government however forbade the mass. It was to have been the traditional reversal of the Roman Catholic mass with the sacrifice of a male goat and participants wearing goatskins.

Instead the experts had to make do with a special farewell witching supper, the menu of which will be as follows: sea-goat soup, toads legs, mashed garlic and sausage, roast goat with magic herbs, goat cheese, apples roasted on a broomstick washed down with bartota witches wine and followed by Alambique brandy and twisted Tuscan cigars.

They were entertained by a folklore dance group from Usturee called the Tempunos who have kept alive the local tradition of performing a dance routine on certain Saturday's to record the Bordeaux trials.

Drugs: U.S. Looks To Peking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Searching for ways to curb drug abuse, the U.S. government examined China's success in wiping out opium addiction but concluded the Chinese methods would not work in the United States.

The Chinese success was spectacular, federal officials said, but there are these differences between the situation they attacked and the U.S. drug scene today:

—Peking's problem was with opium smokers; the United States' is with heroin addiction which is far more difficult to cure. Heroin is a highly-refined opium derivative.

—The Peking regime then and now holds central authority able to impose stern measures against both drug use and sales throughout the land. Authority is much more diffused here.

As recently as Friday, President Nixon expressed distress about the U.S. drug problem and called for stiffer jail sentences for drug pushers. He said some judges have been too lenient in meting out punishment.

At the time the Communists won control of the Chinese mainland in 1949, China had the world's largest population of opium addicts, numbering in the millions.

Within months, the new central government issued strict prohibitions against opium and other narcotics.

Holders of opium stocks had to turn them in. Addicts were registered for treatment. Those who balked were dealt with severely and some opium sellers and repeated users were reported executed.

Another conclusion of the U.S. intelligence assessment completed last summer is that China does not appear to be illegally trafficking in opium or its derivatives now.

While claiming no absolute proof, the study says opium in the international trade does not appear to originate from China. It also notes that Peking has shown interest in joining international narcotics-control efforts.

Gunboat Bumps British Trawlers

REYKJAVIK (Reuter) — An Icelandic gunboat and three British trawlers had a jostling confrontation in the pitch-dark Friday inside Iceland's 50-mile fishing limit.

Although full details are not yet known, the coast guard said the gunboat had cut the trawl wires of two trawlers and then had to take evasive action to avoid fouling its propellers on netting thrown overboard from the third trawler.

The incident, the fifth of its kind since the start of the new Anglo-Icelandic fishing war, occurred some 20 miles off Iceland's northwest coast.

The coast guard said the gunboat moved in close to cut the wires only after pursuing the trawlers for many hours and repeatedly ordering them to haul in the trawl and sail away.

The coast guard said it is following government orders to "chase away" foreign intruders from inside the country's 50-mile limit imposed on Sept. 1.

Auditor-General Needs Freedom Guarantee—PC

OTTAWA (CP) — The office of the auditor-general needs the protection of new legislation to guarantee him freedom, independence and integrity "in light of a savage government vendetta against him," Gerald W. Baldwin, Progressive Conservative House Leader during the last Parliament, said Friday.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Baldwin said there is an urgent need to underwrite protection for the office, which reviews government spending. He said this year's budget estimates, along with later supplementary estimates likely will total about $18 billion.

Taxpayers deserve the assurance that some accounting will be made through the office of a strong auditor-general, he said.

The present auditor-general, Maxwell Henderson, 63, has frequently complained that the government is not giving him the resources and freedom needed to do his job adequately.

Commission and to provide details on the Opportunities For Youth and Local Initiatives Program budgets.

Mr. Baldwin, the PC candidate for Peace River in the Oct. 30 federal election, said "there is a most urgent need to underwrite some protection for taxpayers in the light of the enormous increases of personnel and expenditures by the federal government over the last few years."

PINK HOT DOGS MAY BE HAZARD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food dyes that turn "egg bread" yellow and hot dogs pink are a fraud on consumers and may present a significant health hazard, a scientist has told the United States Senate.

Concluding a three-day hearing into food safety, a committee of consumer activists and a cancer researcher testified before the select committee on nutrition.

The number of approved food additives have proliferated, they said, and the use of artificial coloring alone has skyrocketed to more than four million pounds last year from 215,000 pounds in 1940.

"In some cases, artificial coloring clearly lowers the cost of a food, because artificial coloring and flavoring are cheaper and more stable than natural fruit or fruit extracts," said Michael F. Jacobsen, graduate microbiologist who heads the Centre for Science in the Public Interest.

"In many cases, though," he added, "artificial coloring is used unnecessarily or for blatantly deceptive purposes."

Some bakers spike their "egg bread" with yellow dye to make the bread look as if it contained more egg yolk than it really does, he said.

Normally grey hot dogs are sometimes colored red outside and pink inside to make them more appealing and mask the high fat content, he added. And low-quality pistachio nuts are colored with red dye, while high-quality ones are not.

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

THE BEGINNING OF THE LONG TRAIL

What was Bobby Fischer's first step on the long trail that has led him to the summit of the world of chess? Well, this game was obviously not his very first but so far as I can determine after a good bit of research, this may be the first recorded Fischer game to give an inkling of what was to come.

His opponent was a high-ranking expert at the time. Bobby was 13. The occasion was the 1955 U.S. Jr. Championship held in Philadelphia. Bobby went on to win this tournament and was on his way!

MP Groos Defends NATO

The NATO alliance as a practical deterrent to war was defended Friday by David Groos, Canadian member of the North Atlantic Assembly, in a speech to the Lady Laurier Club at Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

"In these days when we tend to dismiss wars between major powers as impossible, we tend to forget that what makes them impossible is the threat of an immediate response and the inevitability of overwhelming and devastating retribution," Groos said.

"NATO countries — and Canada is one of them — provide suitable forces and visible evidence of determination and co-operation to show any possible enemy the risk he would take by commencing an offensive operation against any NATO member nation."

Groos has been for the last five years rapporteur of the assembly's military committee, under chairmanship of Fitzroy MacLean, who prepares military studies for the members.

Driver Control Tightens

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

You may eventually have to use a passport-like card to drive a car in Canada, because of the number of drivers who have their vehicles illegally on the road.

In some areas, police believe they still can handle the problem through increased vigilance by traffic officers. In Regina, for example, Police Inspector Clarence Gilbert says he depends mainly on the memory of his traffic officers, because in a small city many drivers in trouble with the law are known to the authorities.

But Prince Edward Island already has found it necessary to issue licences with photographs of driver-owners, to discourage those who might drive while their privileges are under suspension.

And Toronto has found the problem serious enough to operate a special six-man squad to nab drivers whose licences are under suspension for various traffic offences.

Generally across the country, based on totals for last year and this year, more than 200,000 drivers have had their licences lifted, a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows.

Many police are chary about guessing the number who continue to drive without licences.

However, a British Columbia motor vehicle branch official estimated that 40 per cent of the 60,000 provincial residents who have had licences revoked continue to drive. And officials estimate that in Ontario, where 50,000 licences are under suspension, 16,000—8,000 of them in Toronto—still keep their cars on the road.

DRINKERS THE WORST

Quebec had 41,780 permits suspended last year, and 829 drivers were charged with operating vehicles while under the ban.

Other large figures for licence suspensions came from Alberta, 19,000, and Manitoba, 22,801.

Police everywhere agreed that drunken or impaired driving are major reasons for licence suspensions. Some provinces, including Ontario, also operate demerit systems, under which driving privileges are cancelled after traffic offences build up too many points.

The picture in other provinces:

NEW BRUNSWICK: In 1971, the latest period for which figures are available, there were 3,247 suspended drivers. Licences can be lifted for traffic violations under the Criminal Code, accumulating too many demerit points, or for lack of proper insurance.

NEWFOUNDLAND: Police have suspended 1,471 licences this year, compared with 1,487 in 1971. Most are for drunken driving. In addition, licences can be lifted for careless or dangerous driving.

NOVA SCOTIA: 10,000 licences were suspended last year, and 365 motorists were charged with driving while banned. Grounds for suspension include any conviction for traffic violations under the Criminal Code, as well as for breaking some provincial laws.

QUEBEC: 41,780 licences were suspended in 1971 and 829 drivers were charged with driving while prohibited. Permits can be lifted if a motorist is involved in an accident while impaired, or if the driver is not insured at the time of an accident involving a fatality or an injury costing more than $200.

MANITOBA: Peter Dygala, provincial registrar of motor vehicles, estimates that about 25 per cent of motorists continue to drive while under suspension. In the first nine months of 1972, there were 22,801 suspended drivers. Traffic violations under the Criminal Code mean automatic suspension. Licences also can be revoked for violation of the provincial highway traffic act or for medical reasons, failure upon driver retesting or a poor driving record.

ALBERTA: About 19,000 licences have been suspended to date. The rules for suspending licences are similar to those of Manitoba.

BRITISH COLUMBIA: An official of the provincial motor vehicles branch estimates that 40 per cent of B.C. drivers whose licences have been suspended continue to drive. About 60,000 licences have been suspended, and in 1971, a total of 1,230 persons were convicted for driving while banned. Permits can be lifted for receiving too many demerit points; failing drivers' examinations; medical impairments; failure to pay fines and driving without insurance.

Grain Block Feared

EDMONTON (CP) — The National Farmers Union said Friday Canadian National Railways must put more grain cars into use immediately to avoid interruption of wheat loading at western terminals.

In a telegram to CNR president Norman MacMillan, the NFU predicted wheat loading will be delayed until next week unless the pileup is corrected.

Housing Loans

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Housing Corporation expects to loan almost all of the $15 million it has available this year to stimulate housing construction and purchases of mobile homes.

A $5 million fund was established last year to assist builders and purchasers of homes, but Dave Russell, Alberta municipal affairs minister, increased the fund to $15 million in July, when he said provision would be made for purchase of mobile or prefabricated homes.

CUPE Control

REGINA (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 176 representing 850 general hospital workers, which recently voted to withdraw from the national union, has been placed under "administration" by S. A. Little of Ottawa, CUPE national president.

Gordon Quaale of Saskatoon, representative of CUPE hospital locals in Saskatchwan, has been designated as administrator by Little, it was announced Friday.

J. F. MacMillan of Ottawa, national CUPE director, said under the action, provided for in the CUPE constitution, all Local 176 funds will be declared "in dispute" and, in effect, the present local executive will be displaced by Quaale.

U of A Senator

EDMONTON (CP) — Chester Ronning, retired Canadian diplomat, was one of seven persons named today to the Senate of University of Alberta.

Dr. Ronning, China-born son of missionary parents, served as Canadian ambassador to Norway and high commissioner to India before being named special Canadian representative on peace missions to Hanoi. He received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the university in 1965.

Asper Slams Lewis

MINNEDOSA (CP) — I. H. Asper, Manitoba Liberal leader and a tax lawyer, says NDP national leader David Lewis's election campaign theme attacking so-called "corporate welfare bums" is nonsense.

He said Lewis, and the three NDP premiers who back his position, have shown themselves "cynical opportunists, concocting selective statistics to promote divisiveness and even hatred."

DAUGHTERS TO MEET IN EMPRESS

Members of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of Empire from all over Vancouver Island will meet at the Empress Hotel for their joint regional conference, Saturday, Sept. 30th.

Guest speaker will be Mrs. Dorothy Smillie, regent for the Royal Navy chapter, who will describe her experiences while touring Russia this summer.

UVic Team Researches Arctic Dump

By DAVID CLIMENHAGA
Times Correspondent

A plan by a Canadian mining company to dump mine tailings in a Greenland Fjord has been studied, and a safe dumping system designed, by two UVic scientists.

Oceanographers Jack Littlepage and Derek Ellis were employed this summer by Cominco — the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada — to design a tailing dumping system for the company's giant new Black Angel mine in Greenland.

Littlepage said they were hired to show the company how to get rid of the tailings with the least damage possible to the environment.

"We want to predict and control what these things will do," he said.

He said that during their research for Cominco they discovered that layers of clear water, natural tailings and plankton sit in northern fjords like cake and icing in a layer cake.

"Tons of tailings," the flour-like crushed rock left after minerals have been processed out of stone taken from the mine, will be dumped into the fjord, he said.

"Apparently Greenland is willing to pay the price," he commented.

Cominco officials said the lead-zinc mine scheduled to open in late 1973, would extract 1650 tons of rock daily from the steep rock faces of the far northern fjord.

The mine, located on the west coast of Greenland, will employ 250 to 300 people, and ship concentrate crushed at the site to European smelting centres.

★ ★ ★

Company officials said they have no idea how many tons of tailings will be dumped.

Dr. Littlepage said there are three basic ways mine tailings can damage the environent.

The tailings may still contain minerals, lead and zinc in this case, in small enough particles to be absorbed by plant and animal life.

The concentration effect, as seen with mercury and DDT, can result as larger animals eat small animal and plant life that have absorbed the heavy metals.

Waste material will bury and kill any plant and animal life on the bottom of the fjord.

Littlepage said nothing can be done to prevent life on the bottom from being buried and destroyed.

Clear water, however, can be preserved by encouraging the tailings to sink rapidly to the bottom, he said.

"We want to keep the tailings out of the top thirty feet or so," he explained.

Getting the tailings to the bottom as quickly as possible also prevents minerals from being absorbed by marine life, he said.

Littlepage and Ellis showed Cominco where to place the tailing outfalls to prevent the tailings from floating or escaping the fjord.

Littlepage praised Cominco for asking for consultation from oceanographers before the outfall installations were built.

"Usually its 'we're going to dump tomorrow,' "he said.

The first tailings will be dumped when the mine opens in 1973.

Ellis and Littlepage were flown to the Black Angel site in July by Cominco to work on the tailing-dumping saysem.

In their short time at the site, less than two weeks, they studied water turbidity—the amount of dirt in it, temperature, salinity and the amount of oxygen with a testing device consisting of electronic probes on the end of a submerged cable.

While doing this research they discovered the layered effect in the water, Littlepage said.

★ ★ ★

The pair were consulted by Cominco, Littlepage said, because of an independent research project they did, mapping mine tailings in Quatsino Sound from Utah Mine's Port Hardy mine.

He said they found they were able to follow and check the make-up of tailings from the mine by analysing the particles in the water.

That study led to the Cominco project.

HOSPITAL DEFENDS ABORTION RULING

The decision to allow abortions to be performed was made by the board of directors of Victoria General Hospital with the community in mind, acting executive director John Murray said Friday.

Murray said he wants to make it clear why the board decided to allow abortions at the hospital, which under its former operators, the Sisters of St. Ann, did not offer the medical procedure.

"The question has never been whether or not the board of directors approved of the principle of abortions, nor is it the function of the board to approve or disapprove of each case." Murray said.

"The decision to be made by the board was, considering that they were directors of a hospital owned by the public, and operated by a public society with public monies, whether they had a moral right to refuse the use of the facilities by a qualified physician who had convinced a group of his peers that the health of his patient required the termination of her pregnancy.

"The decision of the board of directors was simply that they did not have the moral right to refuse the use of a public acute general hospital for any legitimate medical procedure performed by a qualified physician," Murray said.

Murray said the board took four months to decide on the abortion issue and that it was "a very careful decision, not taken lightly."

The hospital is expected to begin performing authorized abortions on Oct. 13, he said.

TRADITIONAL native talking stick, carved by B.C. parks carver Ralph Humphrys, was presented to park naturalist Freeman (Skipper) King at a surprise 81st birthday party in Strawberry Vale community hall Friday night. Talking sticks were placed in the ground to demand silence when an Indian chief was about to speak. Canoeists, anglers, archers, school board members, policemen, politicians, and people from the parks and forestry branches attended the party to pay tribute to Skipper's love of the outdoors and young people. He and Mrs. King were given several gifts including a cheque for $5,000, presented by Maj.-Gen. George Pearkes, to be used for whatever purpose Skipper sees fit.

Blanshard Problem Goes to Strachan

Highways Minister Robert Strachan is expected to meet Victoria and Saanich representatives next month on the problem of Rose - Blanshard street extension.

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich said he had approached the minister to arrange such a meeting — including both elected and administrative representatives — and was told Strachan wants "two or three weeks" to familiarize himself with the matter.

He said Strachan responded "positively" to the approach, which also has been given priority by Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

SOCREDS FAILED

The previous government, despite urgings from both municipalities and prodding of Greater Victoria Chambers of Commerce, failed to negotiate completion of the multi-laned route from downtown Victoria which dwindles to a normal street at Tolmie Avenue.

Ultimate objective was to connect the street to Patricia Bay and Trans-Canada highways in the vicinity of Town and Country shopping centre.

Another matter involving the interests of both Saanich and Victoria is future undertakings of the Capital Improvement District Commission which was founded by the Social Credit government.

Mayor Curtis said he did not disagree with Inner Harbor beautification as Victoria proposes, "but if the new government maintains the CIDC and the system of paying grants to the Municipalities of Greater Victoria, then I would certainly hope that we don't focus our attention solely on the Inner Harbor because there is so much more we should be looking at."

He suggested Portage Inlet and the Colquitz River system of Saanich and Craigflower Creek running through Thetis Park at View Royal as deserving attention for conservation and beautification.

Curtis also hoped the NDP government would allocate more money to the commission which has been getting a $200,000 budget in recent years. This amount has shrunk due to inflation and Curtis suggested it should be raised to $350,000 to $400,000 a year.

The CIDC has operated very well in a non-partisan way. It has done a good job and should be strengthened" he said.

Central Saanich 'Sellout' Rejected

Central Saanich municipality will never have the reputation of selling out to developers, says Mayor A. M. Galbraith.

A firm zoning policy has been up-dated by Central Saanich Council this year to protect the municipality which, with the advent of sewers and completion of the Pat Bay highway, becomes ever more attractive to Victoria neighbours.

At least 85 per cent of Central Saanich is rolling farmland and treed park area and the comprehensive zoning plan ensures that it will remain that way, said Mayor Galbraith in an interview this week.

"We can't take all the credit," adds the Mayor.

In 1967, council noted with alarm the beginnings of suburban sprawl and adopted a bylaw to ensure that a 10-acre zoning protected rural land from subdivision.

FARMS SAVED

With the installation of a $2,000,000 sewer this year, council has developed detailed zoning and subdivsion regulations to ensure that only those areas which are not agriculturally rich, will be devoted to residential growth.

The sewer is sized to accommodate the most densely built-up areas of Brentwood, Saanichton and Turgoose Point and cannot be tapped into on its long journey across the Peninsula.

Provision is made however for slow, natural growth of these residential areas with a five-acre periphery to take care of the homes (about 100 per year) which will be built until about 1995.

"By that time" says municipal assessor Gay Wheeler, "we will probably have to reconsider the single family home as a practical mode of living." Wheeler commented that Saanich municipality already reflects a trend toward higher-density dwelling.

Lot sizes in the residentially-zoned areas are smaller than average, about 7500 to 10,000 square feet. Frontages are generous however, 75 to 84 feet in width to avoid the strip development look. On major streets, setback requirements have been increased.

APARTMENT ZONING

To meet the demand for higher density dwelling which will arise when the Peninsula hospital is completed on Mr. Newton Cross Rd. and to accommodate elderly residents who can no longer maintain homes, Council is considering zoning for apartment, duplex and condominium construction.

These buildings will be limited to a height of three storeys and must be landscaped to municipal specifications.

Building requirements are stiff in Central Saanich.

In order to obtain a building permit, the developer must first produce $600 in cash for the sewer connection to each lot and is asked to pay $100 per lot for a municipal park preservation fund.

Construction of roads and installation of all services are the developer's responsibility and Central Saanich requires that boulevards planted with trees be added.

Now council is moving into the field of commercial growth and has asked Capital Regional Board planners to consider a "village" concept for Saanichton and Brentwood.

Grocer Got Point Of 'Toy' Pistol

A man who may have used a toy gun to hold up a small grocery store Friday night, absconded with about $80 in cash.

Kwei Pin Leung, proprietor of Gladstone Food Market, 1358 Gladstone, said he wasn't about to argue with the man who was pointing the pistol at him. "I just looked at him in the face a few seconds and gave in."

Victoria police detectives said whether or not the gun was real is of no consequence the offence is still regarded as armed robbery.

Leung said he was standing behind the cash register when the man entered the store about 9:40 p.m.

"I saw him carry a pistol — a gun. The gun was pointed at me. He asked me to open the cash register and give him all the money, he said.

"I put the money in his paper bag. He grabbed the bag, asked me to turn around and he ran away," said Leung.

Police searched the area but found no suspects.

The suspect is about 20 years old, five feet, eight inches tall, about 140 pounds with a long, thin face. He was wearing a light brown, shiny overcoat with a hood, police said.

'Honest' Sex Praised

Young people's sexual habits today may be "little different from those of rabbits" but their honest and open approach to human sexuality is a healthy positive force which should not be repressed or downgraded, Dr. Scott Wallace told a Human Sexuality Workshop Friday night.

A "whole new awareness of the rich human influence of sexuality" has revolutionized our generation, Wallace said, and many of our problems today relate to society's inability to accept this revolution.

Wallace, who besides being a physician is the MLA for Oak Bay, praised the younger generation's more enlightened view of human sexuality, blaming the repressive attitudes of past eras for many of our social problems today.

He urged parents to be more open to sexual and moral discussions within the family group, not only for the sake of family harmony but to alleviate a great deal of parental suffering over changing social mores.

NUDITY DEBATED

In explaining the younger generation's more objective, positive view of sexual expression, Wallace emphasized that he was not supporting this point of view, only describing what represents the thinking of a substantial number of young people today.

He pointed out that many dilemmas have emerged out of the sexual revolution.

Public nudity is constantly being debated in courts, he said, and the dividing line between propriety and obscenity is "almost as thin as a G-string."

"Apparently it is quite acceptable for females to expose almost all of their bodies on the beach, but illegal to remove these last few strips of cloth for the purpose of entertaining in a night club.

"Another similar problem created by the sexual revolution," he said, "is the dissemination of pornographic materials, which can be devastating in the hands of children and immature young people."

Wallace said pornography perhaps "serves a useful purpose in meeting the sexual needs of certain members of society who might otherwise inflict their anti-social behavior against other citizens."

RAPE DOWN

In Denmark, where pornography is not controlled, Wallace said, the number of forcible rapes reported is four per 100,000 population, compared to 18 per 100,000 in the United States.

As long as exposure to this type of material is voluntary, he added, nudity and pornography do have positive value and society as a whole is unlikely to suffer.

To adopt strong censorship of these sexual outlets would be "out of keeping with a mature free society."

Undersea Gardens Seeks New Image

An expensive refurbishing both inside and out has been planned next month for Pacific Undersea Gardens, an Inner Harbor fixture since June, 1969.

The renovations — which include a new location just across the wharf from its present spot, but no plans for a killer whale — are an attempt to create a whole new image.

Major shareholder for the venture, Robert Wright, of 4451 Shore Way, Saanich, is owner of Victoria's Sealand.

Wright added the Gardens will be moved to a position just inside the finger wharf near the Wax Museum within the next month.

Plans then include an entire facelift for the outside appearance and inside.

Wright said architect Allan Lester of Peterson and Lester has been hired and all work should be finished before next summer's tourist rush. A cost estimate is not available, he said.

The move will be the second for the Gardens, owned by Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd., of Vancouver.

It opened on the site of the present Sealand attraction in 1963 but was moved to the Inner Harbor in 1969.

APPEAL HITS 11 PER CENT

A total of $83,177 has already been collected in this year's United Appeal campaign, 11½ per cent of the $724,931 target.

At this time last week $58,161 had been donated, 8.2 per cent of this year's goal, which is 12 per cent more than the amount raised in 1971.

Campaign chairman Mrs. Shirley Dowell says the reason for the early returns is largely due to early planning, which began in June.

The special names section, under Jack Mercer, began work in July and has already raised 50 per cent of its objective. The hotels and motels section also began collections that month.

All 55 divisional chairmen have been appointed.

The residential canvass will begin Oct. 16 and Mrs. Dowell reports that the campaign is still 600 short of the 6,000 volunteer canvassers that will be needed.

She says that each canvasser will be asked to call on between 20 and 25 houses, involving three hours of volunteer time, including callbacks.

She asks men and women willing to help to phone the campaign office at 385-6708.

It was announced today that Peter Darling, 1969 campaign chairman, has been appointed to succeed Eric Charman as first vice-president of the Community Chest of Greater Victoria.

Man Jailed

A man who has a criminal record dating back to 1952 was sentenced to three months for possession of an offensive weapon by Judge E. D. Jorre de St. Jorre in provincial court today.

Howard E. Ettinger, 41, of no fixed address, was apprehended by Victoria police Sept. 22 on Fisgard Street after he was seen pointing a knife with a five-inch blade at another man.

Enumeration: First You Find the Voter

IT HAS BEEN MY PRIVIlege this month to serve as chauffeur and handyman to an agent of the Crown. Temporary though her commission is, we both take it most seriously. We consult for as long as 10 minutes before tacking an official notice to a tree, and have spent an entire evening tracking down an elusive voter whose name belonged on the list of electors.

My wife, the federal enumerator has warned me that I'd better be careful what I write about the job into which she was sworn by the Willow Point postmistress. No blabbing of official secrets, no political partisanship, and not a word about the bag of potatoes the old logger gave us.

"He didn't give them to you," I protested at this point. "They were a gift to me, and I'm not a civil servant.

Nor am I spilling classified information when I point out that lining up a crew of enumerators presents its difficulties. There was a gap in the ranks, my dear one volunteered to fill it, and was assigned to cover a sizeable chunk of territory.

It started with a clutch of sideroads, zigzagged down the highway for several miles, and ambled out along a point of land to the sea.

I suggested that we start at the south end and work north, but the enumerator pulled rank on me.

Much better, she said, to do the side roads and the point first. Also, it wouldn't be necessary for me to get out of the car except when a Notice of Rural Enumeration sign was to be posted. Then, under her direction, I could extract hammer and carpet tacks from the glove compartment and put the notice up.

That was half a tank of gas and several hundred duly registered voters ago. With minor exceptions, I adhered to the behavior pattern laid down for me. Stayed in the car, that is, while the enumerator added names and occupations to the sheets on her clip-board.

Occasionally a resident dog of friendly inclination would lighten the tedium of waiting by trotting over for a non-political discussion. On one wooded byway, a fellow with a chain saw paused in his labors to pass the time of day. We agreed that the big northern coho salmon should be showing up soon in our home waters, but we didn't talk politics.

Sometimes too, the enumerator would drop a few spring details as I drove her to the next stop on her beat.

"Sorry to be so long back there," she would say, "but we were trading recipes." Or again, "You know that place with the hanging flower baskets? That stand they're hung from is an old hay rake."

There's no better way to learn a district than to serve as an enumerator, or to tag along with one. By the end of the first day, we had become aware of a Vancouver Island population trend only suspected before.

Until only a few years ago, the lands to the west of the Island Highway were given over largely to second growth that took root among the stumps of the evergreen forest that once clothed the coastal slopes. Today, the crowding alder stands that followed the fir woods are being cleared as fast as the subdividers can lay them low.

The push inland hasn't penetrated very deeply yet. On many a road, the new blacktop soon gives place to gravel, and the gravel peters out at the edge of an alder swamp.

But the houses and mobile homes are going in, the red logging-country earth is growing gardens, and a new chapter of Vancouver Island history is taking shape. Villages and probably towns are in the making: give them a few more years and they will acquire names.

By the time that startling realization burst upon me, I was thoroughly grooved into my background role as the husband of the lady enumerator in the yellow sweater. Then we came to the place by the sea where the old logger who grows the good potatoes still keeps a highrigger's belt and spurs hanging handy in his garage.

We fell to talking. I got out of the car. By the time the enumerator had finished her stint, the bag of new-dug potatoes was in my fist.

The list is complete now all voters present and accounted for—and this evening we sampled those nonpartisan spuds. We've never tasted better.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

FUNNY at the time, forward Phil Esposito manages laugh at own expense after falling during player introduction before Friday's Russia-Canada hockey game in Moscow. Not so funny, however, was Russians' 5-4 victory. International rivals meet again Sunday. (AP Wirephoto)

Phil's Tumble Was an Omen

MOSCOW (CP) — You knew it was going to be another one of those nights for Team Canada when big Phil Esposito skated out to acknowledge the cheers of the crowd and fell flat on the seat of his hockey pants.

Brad Park helped up his fallen leader and Espo bowed to the roaring capacity throng of 15,000.

But 60 minutes later, nobody in the Canadian camp was laughing after witnessing the Soviet national team—down 3-0—come back with five goals in the last 11 minutes to take a 5-4 victory.

The stunning turn-around, which gives Russia a 3-1 lead in the eight-game series with one game tied, was witnessed by Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev, President Nikolai Podgorny and Premier Alexei Kosygin.

There were also about 3,000 Canadian fans in the stands and they roared throughout the game as Canada tied up the Russians most of the way.

HENDERSON SCORES TWO

Russian scorers were Yuri Blinov, Vyacheslav Anisin, Vladimir Shadrin, Alexander Gusev and Vladimir Vikulov.

Both clubs stumbled through the first 10 minutes until Team Canada seemed to settle down, forcing the Soviet squad into errors.

The pros left the ice at the end of the first period with a 1-0 lead on Parise's goal, set up by Gilbert Perreault and Rod Gilbert, at 15:30. Parise scored from directly in front of goalie Vladislav Tretyak, from about 20 feet out.

Clarke, assisted by Henderson, put Canada up 2-0 early in the second, taking the pass from the corner and tucking the puck between the goalie's legs. Henderson made it 3-0 midway through the period when he deflected in a pass from the boards with Guy Lapointe and Clarke drawing the assists.

The period ended that way, but not before Henderson was knocked unconscious when he slid into the boards after a check from Alexander Maltsev.

Blinov's goal came when Vladimir Petrov fed him the puck up the ice and defenceman Pat Stapleton fell trying to get back into the play. Henderson made it 4-0 for Canada on a similar play—staying up the ice and taking the pass from Clarke.

Then in the third Yuri Liapkin hit Anisin with a shot from the point and the youngster tipped it in. Eight seconds later, Shadrin caught the far, open top corner on Tony Esposito's glove side. Suddenly, it was 4-3 and the crowd was stunned.

Both teams were a man short—Clarke and Gennady Tsygankov off for holding and high-sticking respectively — when Gusev tied it up with a shot from out near the point which went in high over Esposito's shoulder on the stick side.

Defenceman Rod Seiling of New York Rangers was the goat on the winning goal.

He gave the puck away in the Canadians' end to allow Vikulov to go in alone on Esposito. He pulled the goalie and tucked the puck into the open corner.

Both the Russian and Canadian reporters were critical of the refusal by head coach Harry Sinden and assistant John Ferguson to meet reporters after the game.

Ferguson did come into the dressing room corridor for a short time and summed up the reversal with:

"We played 50 minutes of hockey—but you've got to play 60 minutes against this club."

Sinden, he said, was "inside —I don't think he'll be out."

"Every hockey club has a letdown of four or five minutes in every game. It's inevitable. But the way we let down in that last eight minutes really hurts."

GIL PERREAULT FOURTH TO QUIT

MOSCOW (CP) — Gibert Perreault, young centre for Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League, quit Team Canada Saturday, bringing to four the number who have walked out since the club arrived here Wednesday.

Perreault played in Friday night's 5-4 loss to Russia and turned out for practice today. Then he asked coach Harry Sinden to let him go home. He said:

"I'm not mad or anything. But if I'm not going to be all that much help, I want to get back and get in shape.

"I'm not in shape and I want to be ready for the start of the season."

Sinden will dress Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens and Eddie Johnston of Boston Bruins as goalies for Sunday.

Gee, It's Been 21 Years —Since Ronnie Smith, Too!

We're moving out this weekend, to next door, and a mite closer to downtown which we left 21 whole years ago. Yes, it's been that long at this stand, and some of the youngsters from the old North Ward School, our new site, may recall some of their lunch hours well.

They should. Because they were easy marks. I was the ogre with the blood-red aggie who used to break into their games, and I still have a bagful of marbles at home to prove it. When they wouldn't let me use my steelie, I got huffy and quit.

It was in the merry month of May in 1951 that the Times, after 40 years, packed up and left Broad Street, and relocated here on the first Saturday-Sunday weekend.

If it was an historic occasion, there was another to match it. And no decent baseball fan will ever forget it.

★ ★ ★

Yes, sports history was made right here in dear, old Athletic Park. That was the afternoon that righthander Ronnie Smith, a pitcher with the Victoria Athletics, hurled 23 innings, all by himself, and lost.

The score was 1-0, and at the time all sorts of records were established in the now defunct Western International Baseball League.

Besides, it was the longest 1-0 game in the history of organized baseball, the longest scoreless game on record, and a record for consecutive scoreless innings pitched in one game by one pitcher.

Salem Senators, who won the game, used two pitchers, Ludwig Lew and Joe Mishasek. They gave up eight hits. Smith allowed 18. Hugh Luby broke it up in the top of the 23rd when he flied deep to left fielder Tom O'Laughlin with Glen Stetter on third. Stetter scored after the catch. Only one Athletic reached third base. That was Hal Jackson, in the first, and again in the 20th. Only two other Victoria runners got to second.

Don Pries, chief scout of the Baltimore Orioles, was an Athletic then, and Billy Dunn was playing shortstop. And there was only one error.

★ ★ ★

That was the weekend, too, that Russia was first admitted to the International Olympic Committee — now the Soviets are supreme in the Games; Officer-cadet Fred Richardson had won the weekly rifle shoot at Heals Range, and a young fellow called the "giant killer" had claimed another victim in golf.

Bob Fleming of Gorge Vale defeated Ron McLeod, currently the professional at Jasper, in the Vancouver Island Match play final at Royal Colwood.

Meanwhile, back at the Gorge, professional Joe Pryke had a couple of cuties who were about to make names for themselves. Competing in the club championship were Misses Dot Herbertson and Shirley Fry. They are better known today as Dorothy DeGirolamo, and Shirley Naysmith, and their names still appear in the prize lists.

★ ★ ★

The Shamrocks too, were riding fairly high. At least they had just edged the Nanaimo Native Sons, 12-10, and how many boxla fans can remember that name, Native Sons? Can't, eh? Well try this: New Westminster Commandos. That was the team the Shamrocks were to meet next.

Norm Baker was the Shamrock gun who fired loudest on that Saturday night. He had three goals and two assists. Buzz Long was in goal for the Irish and Fred Fulla, one of the greatest in this book, was the bulwark for Nanaimo.

More history, too, was just around the corner.

The all-star city soccer team to meet Fulham of the English League first division had been named. In goal was Joe Travis; on left wing was his brother Ab. And everyone surely knows how that turned out. Victoria won 1-0. Joe Travis was spectacular in the nets and little brother Ab . . . sure, he scored the only goal.

Let's see now: 1951. A 1950 Chevrolet Sedan could be picked up for $1,937, a better buy was a '35 Hudson at $160; a house for $10,750 was described as "the buy of the year," gascoe briquets (huh?) were selling at $21.50 a ton, and two cords of wood would be dumped in your driveway for just $10.

Besides, the venerable (even then) Doug Fletcher, was the subject of a caricature by Mort Graham in a centre spread on the sports page. It's the same Doug we know today, and still venerable.

Then there was the front-page story.

"Reserve Clause in Baseball being probed," said the headline.

In that regard time has stood perfectly still. The reserve clause has weathered many a storm, and right now is the bone of contention between the NHL and WHL in their player war.

So what's new?

Soviet Elite Took Most Puck Tickets

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet hockey joined the big time Friday night with an elite crowd, tickets priced higher than for the Bolshoi Ballet, and Western advertising adorning the boards for the first time in the Soviet Union.

Soviet hockey players have been world class for years. But it took the hoopla of the Canadian-Soviet hockey series and the invasion of Canadian fans and television to make the game atmosphere like that in the West.

Still there difficulties. The only Soviet response to the rhythmic chants and handclapping of the 2,600 Canadians who shouted "Go, Canada go." was the stolid Soviet answer of "Shybu, shybu."

That's Russian for "puck, puck," and they use it as a cry of exhortation to their hockey players.

And the Russians had no T-shirts decorated with hammer and sickles to offset the maple leaf shirts and sweaters of the Canadian fans. Nor did they have signs like the Canadians who waved "Mission Impossible" placards, a reference to the tough time Team Canada is having against the Soviets.

What was impossible was for most ordinary Russians to get tickets to the matches. They had to watch on television.

There was a rumor that 2,000 of the 15,000 tickets would be sold to the public, but it was doubtful if any Soviet citizen without good connections got one.

It was known the tickets sought by the Canadian embassy were cut to the bone. The embassy, in the interest of good Soviet-Canadian relations, refused to discuss the situation.

Tickets were priced at six rubles, nearly twice the price of the best Bolshoi Ballet ticket. Soviets would gladly have paid six rubles (about $7.20 at the official rate) but no tickets were available.

There were reports one ticket would bring about $60 on the black market.

One Western diplomat said he saw a Communist party emissary peel off the cash for 100 tickets at the special window where they could be purchased. Word was the tickets went to party officials, sports committee officials and other worthies.

The crowds that swirled in the lobbies between periods were decked out in their best clothes, probably better dressed than the average Soviet concert crowd.

Advertising on the boards of the rink, not done in North America but standard practice in Western Europe, was applied when the Soviets found they could sell it because Canadian television was broadcasting the games.

One source said each of 12 brand names of underwear, beer, Japanese television sets and a car wax painted on the boards brought the Soviets $10,000.

Nats Test Cougars

Victoria Cougars rang up two straight exhibition victories at the expense of B.C. Junior Hockey League opposition and tonight step up with "their own kind" of company.

Cougars face Vancouver Nats, their Western Canada Major Junior Hockey League rivals, in Memorial Arena at 8:30.

Trailing 2-1 going into the third period although outshooting their rivals by a wide margin, Cougars popped in three unanswered goals to pull out a 4-2 decision over the BCJHL Vancouver Villas Friday in Kerrisdale.

Terry Ewasiuk, Dale Cook, Al McLaren and Cal Kitchings scored for Cougars, who outshot Villas 57-21 but were stymied time and time again by the hot goaltending of Andy Midlyk.

Jerry Blanchette and Chris Dyer scored Vancouver's goals.

Elsewhere on the junior scene, Saskatoon Blades outroughed Edmonton Oil Kings 7-4; Regina Pats defeated New Westminster Bruins 5-2 and Flin Flon Bombers edged Winnipeg Jets 7-6.

Ninety-two of the game's 110 minutes in penalties were handed out in the rough opening period at Edmonton. Ralph Klassen scored two goals to spark Saskatoon.

At Regina, rookies Chris Anessley and Bob Laird scored the first two goals, holdovers Dennis Sobchuk, Mike Wanchuk and Glen Ing added the others as the Pats, the defending Eastern Division champions, out-shot New Westminster 45-28.

Canucks Flying High

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks and Pittsburgh Penguins are enjoying a moment of success they inevitably will wish carried over to the regular National Hockey League season.

The Penguins won their third without a loss in preseason play Friday night 5-3 over winless Philadelphia while the Canucks, also 3-0, bombed Los Angeles Kings 6-1 with five third-period goals.

In other exhibition play, Chicago Black Hawks tied Boston Bruins 3-3 at Chicago, New York Islanders won their first game, 2-1, over Buffalo Sabres at Peterborough, Ont., and St. Louis Blues came up with two last-minute goals at Kitchener, Ont., to edge New York Rangers 8-6.

Bob Schmautz did the job almost single-handedly for Vancouver at Medicine Hat, Alta. The little winger scored three goals and assisted on two others as the Canuck outburst broke a 1-1 tie with the Kings.

Andre Boudrias, Dave Balon and defenceman Barry Wilkins also picked up the scoring pace from Schmautz. Doug Volmar had given Los Angeles a 1-0 lead midway through the first period.

Lou Angotti's goal at 18:05 of the third period salvaged the tie for Chicago. The score was retribution for the Hawk centre who had the puck stolen off his stick earlier in the period by Boston's Fred Stanfield who turned it into Boston's go-ahead goal.

Power play goals by Bill Harris and Germain Gagnon were the margin of victory for New York's new Islanders' franchise. But they had to survive two disallowed goals by Buffalo in the final 43 seconds.

The first score appeared to bounce out of the goal, the second was dissolved by a whistle that preceded the score. Tracy Pratt was the Buffalo marksman.

Jack Egers broke a 6-6 tie and Floyd Thompson's second goal of the game into an empty net moments later gave St. Louis it's free-scoring win over the Rangers who had stopped them the previous night 6-2.

Mike Murphy, Wayne Merrick, Chris Evans, Norm Denney and Kevin O'Shea also scored for the Blues. Pete Stemkowski topped the game scorers with three for the Rangers. Tommy Williams, Gene Carr and Lawrence Sacharuk supplied one each.

Bowler-of-Week Hunt Starts Sept. 30

It's that time of the year again!

Bowlers on southern Vancouver Island lanes are tuning up their tossing arms for the 10th annual Bowler-of-the Week contest.

The 26-week contest, sponsored by the Victoria Times, begins Sept. 30 and continues until April 13 except for a two-week Christmas break between Dec. 16 and 29.

Each week runs from Saturday morning until the following Friday night.

All bowlers competing in regular league play in the Greater Victoria, Sooke, Sidney, Salt Spring Island, Duncan, Chemainus, Lake Cowichan and Youbou areas are eligible for the contest.

The person rolling the highest three-game scratch series in each of four categories — men's and women's tenpins as well as men's and women's fivepins — will be named Bowler-of-the-Week and receive a crest and recognition in the Times.

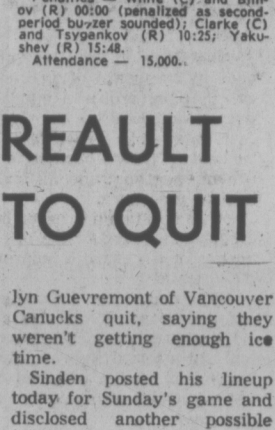

In the event of a tie, the bowler rolling the highest single game will be declared the winner. However, competitors can only win one award in each category.

Weekly winners are all automatically eligible to enter the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs in April. Rolloff winners collect trophies and, if they are a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times, a $100 bonus.

Detailed copies of the rules will be available at all bowling alleys south of Chemainus within the next two weeks.

Coach's Vow Quick Lesson At Mt. Doug

Defending champion Victoria Tyees and always-challenging Oak Bay matched front-running strides, Mt. Douglas coach Brian Cornall decided to crack his whip, and the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League season is far from over for Mount View Hornets.

The unbeaten Bays and Tyees both carved out third straight successes, but there's a hint that Hornets, although beaten Friday, deserve some of the spotlight.

The Tyees, last year's B.C. champions, dropped Mount View, 1-0, but the Hornets indicated they're still very much in contention for league honors.

Winger John Iverson, first-timing a pass from Gary McLaren at the 15-minute mark, scored the Victoria goal and goalkeeper Dan Wilmhurst took over to check Hornets the rest of the way in a match played under difficult weather conditions.

The Bays were clearly the dominant team in a home-field, 5-1 victory over Esquimalt. Held to a 1-0, half-time lead provided by Bob Gutierrez' penalty goal, the Bays erupted for four markers in the second half.

Gutierrez added two more after the intermission while Bill Okell and Steve Bowers supplied singles.

Paul Carson counted the lone Esquimalt goal.

In the only other game Friday, second-half goals by Howie Kirk and Doug Klingsbohn helped Reynolds rally for a 2-2 draw with Claremont. Tom Elwell and Mike Costello were the Claremont scorers.

Belmont claimed its second victory of the season via the default route from Mt. Doug.

Mt. Douglas coach Cornall had warned his players that he would forfeit the points if not enough players turned out for practice.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

'Field Goals' Help Menne

ROBINSON, Ill. (AP) — "Man, I made me some field goals out there," Bob Menne enthused after assuming top spot in the field going into today's third round of the $100,000 Robinson Fall Golf Classic.

Menne, who hasn't made expenses since challenging for the title in the rich National Airlines tournament early in 1970, was talking about the long putts — those from field goal range — he made en route to a five-under-par 66 in Friday's second round.

Among his six birdies were putts of 35, 30, 25 and 20 feet.

And he holed out a 108-yard wedge shot for an eagle three on the 557-yard 12th hole.

The 30-year-old Menne had a 36-hole total of 136 — six under par on the 6,556-yard Crawford County Country Club course, and a one-stroke over Jim Colbert, veteran Dick Rhyan and Steve Oppermann, tied at 137.

Rhyan and Colbert matched 68s and Oppermann had a 69.

KNUDSON PRESSING

The half-dozen at 138 included Toronto's George Knudson, the winner here two years ago, former U.S. Open titleholder Orville Moody, first-round leader Grier Jones, Larry Ziegler, Dave Marad and Rocky Thompson.

Gary Bowerman of Toronto, with 140, and Ken Fulton of Montreal at 144, also made the half-way cut for rounds today and Sunday. Canadians not qualifying were Toronto's Ben Kern 149, Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg 150 and Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver at 151.

Many of the game's great stars are skipping this event, which offers a $20,000 first prize. Among them are Lee Trevino, Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player.

TORONTO (CP) — Lew Taylor of Ile Bizard, Que., shot a three-under-par 67 in the closing round Friday to win the Canadian assistant professionals' golf championship by a comfortable 10 strokes.

Taylor's 212 total for the 54-hole tournament was good for the $1,000 top prize and the Spalding Trophy. He had shot earlier rounds of 72 and 73.

Tony Evershed of Fort Erie, Ont., was second in the $7,350 tournament, firing a closing 72 for a 222 total. Norm Reid of Vancouver and Bob Rossi of Woodbridge, Ont., tied for third at 223, two strokes ahead of Brian White of Niagara Falls, Ont.

Don Allman of Brantford, Ont., leader after Thursday's opening round, shot 74 and 83 in Friday's 36 holes and finished in a seventh-place tie at 228.

Blues on Ropes In Senior Series

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Brampton Excelsiors took a 3-0 lead in the Canadian senior lacrosse championships Friday with an 11-9 win over New Westminster Blues.

The Excelsiors again had to come from behind, as they did in the second game, to overcome a two-goal deficit in the third period.

New Westminster had a 7-6 lead after two periods and scored only in the third, but then ran into a series of penalties which allowed the Excelsiors to score three power-play goals.

After the Excelsiors had gone ahead 9-8, the Blues tied the game with 10 minutes to play, but two goals in 58 seconds with five minutes to play gave the Brampton club the victory. Excelsiors finished with five power-play goals.

For the Blues, Muzz Bryant scored three goals. Whitey McKeen scored two and singles were added by Barry Erlandson, Skip Mint, Brian Pedersen and Earl Hughes.

Blues had 11 penalties for a total of 40 minutes, including a misconduct to goaltender Les Norman. Excelsiors were penalized six times for 12 minutes.

The fourth game of the series will be played Sunday with the fifth game if necessary, scheduled for Tuesday.

Baker to Pay For Late Hit

TORONTO (CP) — Defensive end Bill Baker of Saskatchewan Roughriders has been fined $100 by commissioner Jake Gaudaur, the Canadian Football League office announced Friday.

The fine was imposed for Baker's conduct in a league game at Regina last Sunday when the lineman made a late tackle on quarterback Dave Syme of Edmonton Eskimos. Officials did not disqualify Baker from the game.

Tigers Try Red Sox Trick And Suffer Same Sad Fate

By The Associated Press

Detroit Tigers, trying the same experiment that had backfired the previous night on Boston Red Sox, suffered a similar fate.

The Tigers, in their bid to take first place in the topsy-turvy American League East, gave Chris Zachary his first start Friday night and dropped a 3-2 verdict to the Sox who, consequently, moved one game in front.

The previous night Boston gave rookie Mik Garman his first major league start and it proved disastrous—a 10-3 loss to the Tigers who moved within percentage points of the Red Sox.

Meanwhile, Earl Weaver urgently needs a split in this four-game weekend series by the 1-2 teams in order to keep his third place Baltimore Orioles in contention.

And manager Ralph Houk of New York Yankees is shaking his head. The Yankees have lost six of their last seven games and are in contention only mathematically.

The Red Sox got some clutch relief pitching Friday by Bob Veale and Bob Bolin and a couple of sharp defensive plays by Rick Petrocelli and Rick Miller.

The Yankees, meanwhile, slipped 4½ games behind with only 10 to play, dropping a 4-1 decision to Gaylord Perry and Cleveland Indians.

In other action, Minnesota Twins shut out California Angels 1-0, Chicago White Sox downed Texas Rangers 8-4 and Kansas City Royals trimmed Oakland Athletics 5-3.

Veale bailed Sox starter Lynn McGlothen out of a bases-loaded jam in the sixth inning after Duke Sims' home run had pulled the Tigers within one run of Boston. Petrocelli speared a third-out liner.

But two innings later, the Tigers loaded the bases with none out against him. Enter Bolin, who got Ed Brinkman to rap into a double play. Miller's skidding catch on Jim Northrup's drive ended the inning.

Perry throttled the fading Yankees on eight hits. It was the 27th complete game of the season for the Cleveland workhorse and lowered his earned run average to 1.99.

Houston Astros have been chasing Cincinnati for most of the baseball season, but finally ran into a Big Red stop sign.

Steered by Pete Rose and Johnny Bench, the Reds detoured Houston with a 4-3 victory Friday night that settled the National League West penant race.

"It's the best feeling I've ever had," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson after his players won their second division title in three years.

The 1972 Reds isn't quite the same team that won the National League pennant two years ago, agreed Rose.

"This year everybody was hot," said Rose. "In 1970, Bench and Bobby Tolan carried the team."

"I don't have any vendetta against Houston," said the diminutive Morgan. "I just wanted to beat Houston because that's the quickest way to win the pennant—they're the second-place team."

The Reds' triumph sets up a rematch in the league playoffs against Pittsburgh Pirates, their 1970 foes. The Pirates, who clinched the East Division title Thursday night, defeated Montreal Expos 4-3 in a 12-inning contest Friday night.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia Phillies beat New York Mets 5-4 in 11 innings, Atlanta Braves turned back San Diego Padres 2-0 and Los Angeles Dodgers blanked San Francisco Giants 1-0 in 11 innings.

Freehan Sidelined

DETROIT (AP) — Catcher Bill Freehan of Detroit Tigers, who suffered a hairline fracture of the right thumb in a first-inning collision Thursday night, will be sidelined indefinitely, it was announced Friday.

The Tigers said Freehan underwent x-rays in a Boston hospital Friday.

The Tigers said catcher Gene Lamont of their Montgomery farm club in the Southern League would be called up.

FERGY WON'T PITCH AGAIN THIS SEASON

CHICAGO (AP) — Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago Cubs, a 20-game winner for the sixth straight year, told the Chicago Tribune Friday he is through pitching for the season because of a sore shoulder.

"I'm not going to pitch any more because my shoulder hurts too much and it would be silly to risk aggravating it," said Jenkins, 20-12. He has been bothered with a stiff shoulder for the last 10 days.

SHIRLEY EIKHARDT, the 16-year-old songwriter and singer from Oshawa, is entirely self-taught? She taught herself to play the guitar only five years ago.

PAUL ANKA has written more than 300 compositions, including the theme music for Johnny Carson's Tonight show.

FERRANTE and TEICHER, the twin-piano team, have been playing together in unison since the age of six, where they were prodigies at the Julliard School of Music in New York City.

THE CARPENTERS, Karen and Richard, both started playing local clubs at the age of 16, Richard four years before Karen.

TONY BENNETT, who was born Anthony Benedetto, was given his professional name by Bob Hope, who "Discovered" the young singer in the late '40's.

The lead singers of both BLOOD, SWEAT AND TEARS and THE BELLS are from Britain. David Clayton-Thomas migrated to Canada at an early age; Jackie Ralph's sensuous lyrics are well laced with her north-of-London accents.

IAN TYSON of Ian and Sylvia fame and his own weekly CTV show, was born here in Victoria.

HENRY MANCINI played in the Glenn Miller Orchestra directed by Tex Beneke from 1945 to 1952.

BUFFY SAINTE MARIE was born on the Piapot reserve near Craven, Saskatchewan, but was orphaned, adopted and brought up in Wakefield, Massachusetts. She taught herself to play piano at the age of four.

NEIL YOUNG, the young international rock star, is the son of Scott Young, well-known Toronto sports columnist.

BOBBY CURTOLA, the Canadian teen-age star of the early '60s, is working on a five-year, two-million-dollar contract at the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas.

Russian Technology Export Commodity

New York Times

MOSCOW — A little-noticed announcement on a back page of a Soviet technical journal recently offered a licence to foreign industries for a process to extract aluminum from a relatively common rock called nephelite.

The Soviet offer was typical of a rather unexpected development in the rapidly growing field of east-west trade. Contrary to the common impression of the Soviet Union as an importer of technology and an exporter of commodities, it turns out that the country has a number of industrial techniques of considerable interest even to technologically advanced western industry.

The most publicized example was the recent licensing of the Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp. to use a Soviet technique for casting aluminum ingots that will yield substantial savings to the company.

The extraction of aluminum from nephelite is another case in point. Most of the world's aluminum is derived from bauxite, found mainly in tropical regions. The successful use of nephelite suggests that the resource base of aluminum production could be significantly expanded beyond the known bauxite deposits.

In addition to these two developments in aluminum, Soviet industry has attracted some western interests with achievements in the high-voltage transmission of electricity, an advanced cooling system for blast furnaces and the production of extra-large pipe as well as extremely thin seamless tubing, to mention a few other examples.

Ironically, Soviet advances in industrial technology have often been prompted by inadequacies in the country's own distribution of resources — long regarded in the West as handicaps to Soviet economic development.

In some cases a lack of high-grade mineral reserves made it necessary for the Soviet Union to develop techniques for use with less economical ones. In other instances the quirks of geography, placing resources far from markets, forced the Russians to focus their industrial research on such projects as extra-large-diameter oil and gas pipe or super-high-voltage power-transmission lines suitable for overcoming huge distances.

Soviet industry, which has traditionally given priority to the development of basic heavy industry, appears to be particularly strong in some aspects of metallurgical, rolling-mill and foundry practice and in electrical engineering, including the design of large power-generating units and the high-voltage transmission of electricity.

This emphasis on heavy industry has been reflected in licensing arrangements already completed with western companies. In one of these deals, Andco of Buffalo has bought a license to manufacture an evaporative cooling system for blast furnaces to be used in construction furnaces in Canada. And the American Magnesium Co. of Tulsa, Okla., has arranged to use an advanced Soviet system for the extraction of magnesium at a plant in Snyder, Tex.

Both Pilots Held at Fault

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge has ruled a helicopter pilot was two-thirds to blame for a mid-air collision in 1969 that claimed the lives of both pilots and a helicopter passenger.

As a result of the civil damage suit, first case of its kind in Canada, Mr. Justice T. R. Berger awarded Northern Helicopters Ltd., owners of the helicopter, $17,852 of the $53,610 damages the company claimed.

WHO SAID there's no direction in urban planning? Newly inlaid points of the compass are an attractive and useful feature of the sidewalk at Yates and Douglas—northeast corner—where many a stranger has stalled at the crossroad. Work by city employees cost $120 and was paid for by Mayor Peter Pollen, who suggested the compass after seeing a similar one in Europe. Marvin Moran, 1140 Pandora, gets down for a closer look.

Hijacking on Agenda

LONDON (Reuter) — Cheapfare charters and the increase in hijacking are among problems likely to be discussed at the 28th annual general meeting here next week of the International Air Transport Association.

More than 300 senior executives from IATA's 108 member airlines are expected to be at the three-day meeting starting Monday.

Fare structures and the competition between scheduled carriers and charter operators, who offer cheaper rates to tourists, appear to be high on the list of likely subjects.

Most of the big airlines are losing business to the cheaprate charterers. These losses have been blamed by some airlines for playing a large part in creating adverse financial positions.

Hijacking and the cost of preventing it have also been a drain on some airline fiances.

Gem-Decked Domino Still Packs the House

WASHINGTON (WP) —It's funny, Antoine Domino said the other night, that he and his wife get along so well, considering that she doesn't drink and doesn't like nightclubs, which is where he makes their living.

"My wife has never been any place I played," he said. "She doesn't like ballrooms, and me, I'm crazy about them. She doesn't drink, but I do pretty good. I don't get drunk, but I do pretty good."

Domino, better kniwn as Fats Domino, has been around what seems a long time, but isn't really. He's only 44, but he got famous and moneyed 23 years ago, and people tend to think he's ancient.

But he doesn't feel ancient, he said. In fact, he feels good, despite high blood pressure and other ailments. He loves his music and the $400,000 a year he and his band pull in each year.

He also loves his wife. "I was on the phone with her when you knocked at my door," he said. "We've been married 25 years and we have eight children, four boys and four girls. The oldest is 23 and the youngest is seven."

Domino is on the road 10 or 11 months a year. "But I fly in to New Orleans whenever I get a chance," he said, "and I see her and the family."

Domino, who is 5 feet 4 and 205 pounds, and doesn't look fat at all, has an 18-room, $375,000 home in New Orleans, the city in which he was born and raised, and he intends to stay there.

"I live in the ninth ward," he said. "It's a sort of mixed neighborhood. I like to be with the people I know, people I grew up with. That's where I want to be."

Where he is currently is the Stardust Inn, out in Waldorf, Md., one of the few nightclubs in this area that books bigname performers. It used to be a slot-machine bar, but in the past few months it's become a nightclub featuring prominent acts.

The Stardust Inn seats about 500 people, and the seats are frequently filled. On a recent night Domino drew about 250 to 300 people, most of them in their 30s, but many younger.

"The young people are coming back to me," said Domino. "I don't know why, but it's happening."

Getting dressed for a performance, Domino has a splendid scene. He was spraying perfume on himself and being helped on with jewelry by his valet, a drummer named Walter Lastie, from New Orleans. (The whole band — eight pieces, including piano, drums, guitar, bass and four saxophones, including one who doubles on trumpet — is from New Orleans.)

Domino, when he goes on stage, is a miniature Tiffany's. He's got everything but bells on his toes. He's all diamonds. There's a tie clasp he says is worth $12,500, an $11,000 bracelet with a watch in it, $3,000 worth of cuff links and a $30,000 ring. There are other rings worth thousands of dollars, including one that has a crown about an inch long. One wonders how he can lift his hands to play the piano.

"This is a solid gold money clip," he said. "Lift it. It's too heavy to carry around. That cost bout $8,000 or $9,000," he said. He can't remember which.

This is all a long way from his beginnings. He says he can't remember how much school he had, but it wasn't much. "I used to make $27 a week," he said. "I was making bedsprings. And I worked on an ice truck."

But he got lucky. A few years after he started performing professionally, he was famous and wealthy. He figures he has written more than 100 songs, and a socre of them have been big record sellers.

Domino is a jovial man, and friendly, and he doesn't let things get him down. "My home really cost me more than $375,000," he said. "We had a hurricane, Hurricane Betsy, some years ago, and I got five feet of water in the house. That cost me about $70,000. When was that flood?" he asked Lastie.

"That was Sept. 9, 1965," Lastie said. "I remember it well. I got 6 feet, 11 inches of water in my house."

Finally, Domino got all perfumed and bejewelled and dressed and went on for his act. He and the band played rock and Dixieland and pop, and the audience clapped happily for each tune.

"Maybe you're right, maybe it's soft rock," he said. "I sing like I talk — soft, with all the words clear."

GARDENING
jack beastall

Hydrangea. Everyone knows the name although few can spell it and the majority of gardeners pronounce it wrongly. Its origin is in two Greek words meaning a "water-vase" alluding to the shape of the seed capsule, the combination having four syllables, hy-dran'-je-ah.

The genus includes decorative shrubs and a most useful climber, all native to either the Eastern United States, Japan, China or to Korea, the majority being winter hardy in our local climate.

Ultimate height is to six feet, a convenient size for most gardens, with one reaching to 10 feet, and the climber to 30 feet.

Hydrangeas produce two kinds of flowers, those with rays or petals which are sterile, and those without petals which are capable of producing seeds.

Generally both are found in one flower head, a hundred or so fertile pin-heads surrounded by a dozen sterile blooms with colored petals.

This combination is disconcerting to new gardeners, leading them to assume something is amiss because "the flowers don't open."

Taken in alphabetical order, Hydrangea arborescens (tree-like) heads the list. The type is an upright shrub to 10 feet, but the variety most interesting to the gardener is H.a.grandiflora cultivar "Hills-of-Snow," ranging from four to six feet. The flattish mounds of white sterile flowers which terminate every new growth are shown at A in the accompanying drawing as they appear when viewed from above.

These drawings of hydrangea flower heads were made during the past weeks from plants growing in local gardens. None had reached the specutacular size stated in some plant lists and catalogues, but all adding a good display to the late summer garden.

Next in order comes Hydrangea macrophylla (macro-large, phyllum-leaf) which is still sold under former names such as opuloides, hortensis and hortensia.

It is native to China and Japan, becoming extremely popular when florists found it could be forced into flower in a greenhouse for the potplant gift trade.

Cultivated varieties producing mostly sterile flowers are many, including H.m.caerulea, a clear deep blue; mandshurica, rosea; mariesi, with ray flowers of rose-pink; rosea, pink; veitchii, with sterile flowers of deep rose-pink; hortensia, from pink to blue with all flowers sterile.

It is the last named that is seen in almost every garden, and to many gardeners the only hydrangea they have ever known. Most were received as a gift plant in a pot and later transferred to the garden. A flower head is shown at B.

Although horsensis and hortensia are literally translated "of gardens," in this instance it was given to the hydrangea to honor Madame Hortense Leplant, wife of a celebrated clock-maker of Paris, France. The plant is of course growth, persistant, surviving even when cut to the ground in winter. In fact, it has the resistance and stamina of the blackberry, classifying as a weed if it were native.

Hydrangea paniculata (flowers in panicles), another native of China and Japan, reached the pinnacle of popularity when the cultivar grandiflora (large flowers) was introduced, the large flowers resulting from more ray (Sterile) flowers and less fertile pin heads in the long conical flower heads (shown at C).

The name paniculata variety grandiflora was shortened to "P.G." in catalogues, eventually becoming the "Pee-Gee" hydrangea every gardener wanted.

In the best forms, the creamy ray flowers fade to a beautiful deep rose-pink which brings life to a shrubbery border from early September until the leaves have fallen.

Hydrangea Petiolaris (Long petioles to the leaves) is the outstanding climber having many worthwhile attributes. It will cling to any surface to which its aerial rootlets can become attached, up a wall, over a fence or rock, or it can sprawl down a bank.

While the large flower heads, to eight inches long and five inches wide (shown at D), are profusely borne when grown in a sunny location, it will thrive, climb, and produce a few flowers on a north wall.

The pleasant foliage from April until October gives way to rich mahogany vine tracery for the winter. Flowering time is May into June, a white ray flower forming at the end of each branchlet of fertile flowers.

Hydrangea quercifolia (leaves like the oak) native to the states of Georgia, northern Florida and Mississippi, makes an informal plant, charming in its lax habit. Leaves are eight inches long, six inches wide, three to five lobed, taking on all the colors of fall as the growing season draws to a close.

Popular with all who saw it here some 20 years ago, not many of the purchased plants appear to have survived, possibly due to the predominance of clay in some soils, and lack of sufficient humus to hold summer moisture in gravelly soils. It seemed to thrive on the sunny edge of woodland.

Flowers are produced in panicles to one foot long, the white sterile flowers fading to purple. Height around five feet, width to eight feet, when fully grown.

A Japanese-Korean native is Hydrangea serrata (serrated leaf edges) formerly H. Thunbergi and cuspidata. Many named horticultural cultivars have come from this species, all with typical hydrangea flower heads consisting of mostly fertile pin heads surrounded by a few large brightly colored ray (sterile) flowers.

The genus includes about eight other species each with several varieties, some of which are occasionally found tucked away in the shrubbery of our more venerable show gardens.

Even so, the five mentioned plus varieties and cultivars, would make a fine collection for any garden, and most gardens would benefit by the addition of one or two.

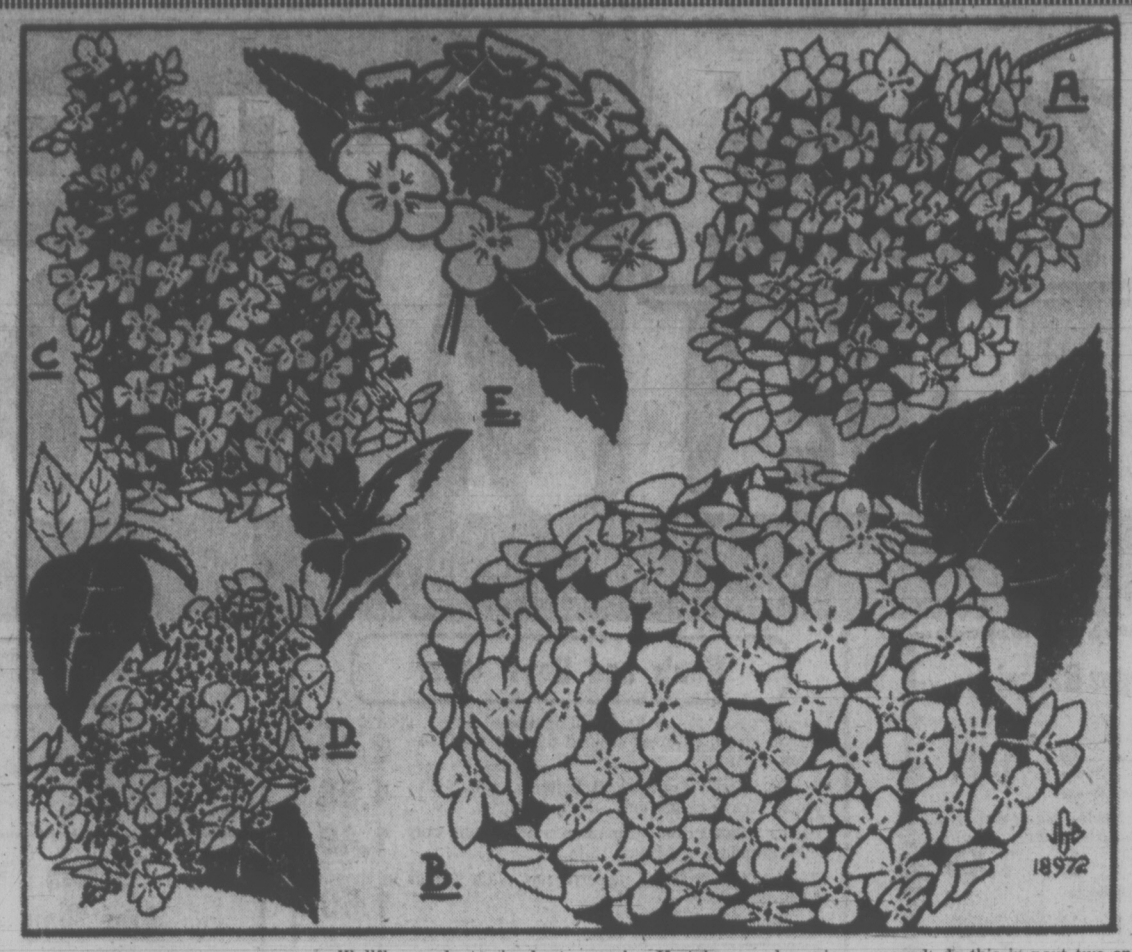

Good flowering results from proper pruning. Petiolaris, the climber, is only pruned if it overgrows its allotted space. Arborescens "Hills of Snow" and paniculata grandiflora (P.G.), last year's growths are cut back to two buds (growth buds) beyond old wood, in spring just as growth starts.

Serrata acuminata can have the same treatment. All these flower on new wood produced in the current season. The more new wood each year the more flowers. This form of pruning also controls height.

The general pruning for the macrophylla group is the removal of old wood and spindly new growths that can never produce good flowers.

Macrophylla cultivar hortensia can have the globe-like flower heads removed as they fade or the following spring, with no pruning back if you expect flowers by June.

Plants partially shortened usually bloom by July, while those cut to the ground (as advised in some gardening books) will not flower until mid August, or early September, causing them to be classified as "fall flowering shrubs."

Work For Week

Wallflower plants give best results planted no later than now. Use a little lime in soil as for cabbage to which they are related, and the same firm planting.

Some areas have had ground frost during past week. If tuberous begonias damaged, remove all loose stems, lift tubers and set into boxes in shed until all growth drops. Then clean the tubers for storing in dry sand at 40 degs. F.

If peony roots must be moved, do this in next two or three weeks. Will remain in one place for many years, so never disturb unless for good reason.

Pick and store the different varieties of apples and pears according to correct dates.

Derelict Grave Markers Offer Mute Testimony To Long-Forgotten Boom

By DENNIS BELL

DAWSON CITY, Y.T. (CP) — Hugh Smith, a towering 88-year-old pensioner from Prince Edward Island, hunched down on one knee to squint at the faded name on a weathered wooden grave marker amid the tangled brambles and wild roses that have turned Dawson City's forgotten graveyard into a wilderness.

"No, it's not him. It's not my friend. But I know he's buried somewhere in this cemetery," said Smith, a gold-rush sourdough who returned to the Klondike this summer for his first visit in 63 years.

Smith was searching for the grave of a friend of his youth in his hometown of Summerside, the friend who had joined the mad stampede into the Yukon in 1898 only to die here the following year of typhoid fever.

CAN'T FIND GRAVE

It was raining and he was soaking wet. His shoes were caked in mud and the thick, thorny undergrowth tore at his raincoat.

It was hopeless. The black lettering on many of the wooden grave markers was illegible, obliterated by 75 years of ferocious winters. Other markers were in pieces, or blow over, and there were hundreds and hundreds of graves on the mountain slopes.

In Dawson City the dead outnumber the living.

"I guess we'll have to give it up. There are just too many graves."

The visit to Dawson City's Boot Hill was the culmination of a 4,000-mile journey by rail and bus for Smith and his wife Belle — they celebrate their 60th anniversary next April — from Summerside to the Yukon.

"I've been telling my wife about this country for 60 years and I thought it was about time I showed it to her. Everything is different, but there are still a few things I can remember — the old post office, the bank where Robert Service was a teller while I was here."

RUSH PETERS OUT

For a few hours after the visit to the graveyard, during a rainy evening in Dawson City, Smith became a young man again, reliving the thrills and excitement of his adventures in the high north.

He turned back the calendar 66 years.

"I was working in the state of Washington and I had a cousin from P.E.I. who had staked a claim on Quartz Creek, about 27 miles out of Dawson.

"It was 14 Above Discovery — that means the claim was located 14 claims up the creek from where the original strike was made. His name was Edgar Milligan."

Smith followed the Trail of '98 up the est coast to Skagway, Alaska, over the Chilkoot to Whitehorse, Y.T., and rode a sternwheeler into Dawson in August, 1906.

In the winter of 1906-7 Dawson City had its last big fling at being the golden metropolis of the North. Then the sourdoughs fled south, leaving Dawson to wither away. The Klondike Gold Rush had ended.

TREKS TO ALASKA

For Smith and his cousin Edgar Milligan, their own personal gold rush had just begun. The panned $40,000 worth of dust and nuggets out of their chunk of Quartz Creek.

"I was out on the creek from 1906 to 1909, working as an operating engineer. My cousin's claim wasn't the richest in the Klondike — in fact, we got only 2½ cents to the pan, and that's a pretty low grade.

"But we worked hard and made it pay."

Milligan used his end of the poke to get married to a young woman from Seattle. In September, 1907, the bridal party wheezed into Quartz Creek aboard Dawson City's only horseless carriage — an automotive monster known as the Red Devil that was the first car in the Klondike.

But the Quartz Creek colors soon faded and Smith decided to try Alaska, where fresh gold strikes were being reported. In February, 1909, he joined forces with two like-minded Norwegians named Charlie and Fritz.

Instead of waiting for the paddlewheelers that came after spring breakup on the Yukon, the three men decided to walk to Fairbanks.

WALK 480 MILES

They camped frequently with the loggers stocking docks along the Yukon with firewood for the stern-wheelers in preparation for the sum.er navigation season.

"Some of the camps were run by one man, some by two, sometimes a man and a squaw. I remember one of them was run by a man who had two squaws to keep him happy.

Smith and his companions walked 480 miles in 14 days in the dead of winter, braving blizzards, mountainous terrain and wild animals. In Fairbanks they split up "and I never saw or heard of the two Norwegians again."

The Prince Edward Islander panned for gold at Cleary Creek in Alaska for a few months, then in June, 1909, took a sternwheeler to St. Michael on the Bering Sea coast down the Yukon River.

In Summerside he married and enjoyed a long, successful career as a farmer and commercial fox breeder.

Smith never forgot the Klondike.

"I've been thinking about it all these years, and now I'm glad I came back, even though it was for just a short visit.

Speaker 'Acknowledged' By Socreds, Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — Social Credit won't run against Lucien Lamoureux, Speaker of the last House of Commons who seeks re-election in Stormont-Dundas Oct. 30 as an Independent.

That means that Mr. Lamoureux faces a Progressive Conservative, a New Democrat and a candidate bearing a "Democrat" label.

A statement from Social Credit Leader Real Caouette says:

"The position of Commons Speaker should have been made permanent some time ago. This is another example of indecision by the Trudeau government who promised the Commons a permanent and independent Speaker.

"Consideration for Mr. Lamoureux, who has been a very honest and very respected Speaker in the last Parliament, prompts the Social Credit party decision not to contest Stormont-Dundas."

Mr. Lamoureux first won the Cornwall-area riding, a mix of French- and English-speaking voters and plagued by unemployment, as a Liberal in 1962.

At a Cornwall meeting Wednesday, Murray Forsyth was named NDP candidate and Mike Cassidy, NDP member of the Ontario legislature for Ottawa Centre, said that when the Liberals chose not to name a candidate, "they admitted that Lamoureux is not an independent."

Mr. Lamoureux, in announcing he will seek re-election, reversing a previous decision, said he had been under cabinet pressure to do so. Informed sources said Prime Minister Trudeau personally urged him to run again.

Mr. Lamoureux has been Speaker since 1966. He first ran as an independent in 1968, with only NDP opposition.

PLANNERS 'NO' COUNCIL 'YES'

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council threw out the advice of its planners Thursday and approved a 171-unit multiple-housing development project on the 10-acre former Shannon Estate at Granville and Fifty-Seventh.

Wall and Redekop, owners of the property for the past 4½ years, propose to build 132 garden apartments and 25 townhouses. The existing mansion, originally the Austin Taylor home, will be restored and turned into 14 luxury units and a common area of 8,500 feet for the use of residents.

The decision went against advice of the city's technical planning board (a group of senior officials whose function it is to advise council on development matters); the City Planning Commission (a generally layman body whose function it is to advise council on planning matters) and the city planner. The Civic Design Panel, a group of architects and others which considers esthetics of design, also expressed some doubts about the project.

The decision quashed a number of alternative proposals, including a park board plan to turn the mansion and part of the grounds into a park.

Given in marriage by her father, the radiant bride wore a gown of Lagoda crepe with peau de Venice lace swirling from the carved neckline to the hemline, and trimming the cuffs of the bishop sleeves. A Cathedral train in folds at the neckline caught by two tiny bows at the waist, flowed from the back of her gown in alternate panels of crepe and lace. The bride's face was framed by a headpiece of flowers with seed pearls and she wore a four-tiered illusion veil. She chose a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and stephanotis. The bride's sister, Linda Roe travelled from Toronto, Ontario, to be maid of honour. She wore a scooped necked blue floral gown with short puffed sleeves, and carried a basket of white and pink marguerites. She wore short white gloves and a pink picture hat. Mrs. Susan Whyte, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Judy Bowman chose orange floral gowns, while Mrs. Joyce Pemberton and Miss Judi Hunter were in pink floral. All wore short white gloves and colored picture hats to compliment their gowns and carried baskets of white and yellow marguerites. The guest's book was attended by Miss Gloria Fair. The four-tiered wedding cake centered the bride's table on a beautiful hand-crocheted tablecloth done by Mrs. Edith Price, grandmother of the bride. The bride's uncle Mr. Allan Lind from Winnipeg, Manitoba, proposed the toast; then dancing was enjoyed by the guests.

BOSUN'S CHARTERS LIMITED
INTRODUCING
"DUTCH AUCTIONS"
Occasionally we have a few good but hard — to — sell boats. When this happens, ELDER BOSUN says "Hold a Dutch Auction". The starting price reflects the fair market value. It is reduced each week by $50. This continues until someone buys the boat or we give it away. This weeks Dutch Auction begins with a 26' Thunderbird, in really good shape with ilb, Genon, main, cruising gear and motor which although a collector's item, is still working. Starting price is $4,000. It will be reduced to $3,950. as of 8 a.m. Sat. 23 and $3,900 on Sat 30 and so on. If this isn't your boat look for next week's auction at

Arts Mingle At Weekend

Symposium

Symposium 72 — a weekend of music, poetry, graphic art and theatre organized by several University of Victoria students will be held at Open Space, 510 Fort St., from Sept. 29 to Oct. 1.

Symposium co-ordinator Bennett Lee said the weekend will feature a film festival Friday evening, poetry readings, music ranging from a baroque trio to a rock band, and an art show during the weekend.

Company One will perform two plays from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday evening.

Lee said a free writers workshop would be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, led by Victoria poet Robert Sward.

Lee described the Symposium as "an effort to bring university arts into the downtown community."

Tickets, $1 Friday and $1.50 on the weekend, can be obtained at Open Space or at the Student Union Building, University of Victoria.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Respectability a 'Hobble'

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

"Almighty God our Father: We are respectable people gathered here. Forgive us. We are men of rectitude and good standing in our communities. Forgive us. Search us out with all the hounds of heaven when we hide from thee in our respectability."

That is from a prayer used a few years ago by a prominent lay-leader in U.S. Protestantism at a meeting called to consider the Church's programs for assistance to the underprivileged peoples of the world.

There is something spiritually suffocating about the well-manicured niceness that is rather highly valued in the Church today, that curious tendency to make faith primarily a matter of mere respectability with a thin coating of spiritual varnish.

Someone has written of a group of Christians who gave the appearance of having been starched before they were washed. There is, of course, another side to church life today, that of radical concern for compassionate service. But no one with intimate knowledge of the Churches today will deny that they often try to hide from the real demands of faith in their respectability.

I would not try to dismiss respectability with a few angry sneers. And in no way do I suggest that disreputableness be cultivated as an aid to saintliness and commitment. But I do say that an excessive concern for respectability does hobble the cause of Jesus Christ in the world.

Jesus' ministry and teaching do not afford much comfort to us ultra-respectable modern Christians. John Oman, an influential theologian of the earlier years of this century, made this point: "The sole evil our Lord turned aside to denounce was just this leaven of respectability. The reason for the exception was that, while other evils the new order would amend, by this evil the new order was denied."

Jesus warned his disciples about the menace of mere respectability. He did, of course, recognize the importance of the laws and conventions of religion and society. But he warned against presuming on them, against the easy assumption that we can work our tickets to the kingdom of God simply by adherence to externals.

Jesus' concern was primarily with the deepest levels of motivation, with inner faith which leads a person beyond mere rule and regulation and convention. His call was to personal freedom in commitment to the purposes of God, freedom which expresses itself in compassionate service of the needs and sufferings of others. His way was not in repudiation of respectability but in rising above respectability.

The Glasgow biblical scholar, William Barclay, expressed an important New Testament insight when he said, "The greatest disaster of the modern Church is that a person has to be respectable in order to get into it." Well?

Mudslide Blocks Mummy-Theft Case

TOFINO — The trial of a Tofino man charged with removing a body from a burial site was postponed to Oct. 13 Friday after mudslides prevented witnesses from reaching Tofino.

Charles Ehlers, 47, is charged under the Archaeological and Historical Sites Act with removing a body from a cave near here on the west coast of the Island.

The mummified body is believed to be that of an Indian who died at least 100 years ago.

An RCMP spokesman said slides had made roads impassable, and that continuing bad weather was preventing planes from getting into the isolated area.

The trial had originally been scheduled to begin yesterday, then was put off to today.

Parkland Dedicated

Oak Bay council has dedicated as parkland eight of the municipality's parks that had not even been designated as such before.

They are:

That part of the Oak Bay Marina that is not in asphalt or buildings, Firemen's Park, Henderson Park, Lokier Park, Loon Bay, Nottingham Park, Oakdowne Park and Quimper Park.

The council will decide at a later date whether to dedicate Thompson Avenue Park as parkland.

Gibbs Park is excluded from the list because some of its .275 acreage may be needed in the future for road-

Ranchers, Park Bison at Odds

★ ★ ★

Diseases Feared

New York Times

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — The famous bison herds of Yellowstone face a new threat of extermination — not from hunters this time but from ranchers who fear that the huge, shaggy animals will stray from the park and infect their livestock with brucellosis.

Brucellosis, common in bison, is a disease caused by bacteria of the genus Brucella. It is also known as Bang's disease or undulant fever. In cattle, brucellosis causes abortions. Humans may acquire undulant fever by drinking milk or eating meat from infected livestock. Undulant fever is characterized by weakness, extreme exhaustion, night sweats, chills and general aches and pains.

Cattlemen insist that the 600 to 700 buffalo in Yellowstone Park be corralled and tested and that all that show brucellosis in their blood be destroyed. Any bison that eluded the roundup would be hunted down and shot. Bison showing no trace of brucellosis would be kept in pens until all bison that could not be captured were destroyed.

Such a program, in the opinion of park officials, would wipe out the Yellowstone bison.

For more than 10 years, not one case of brucellosis has been detected in the cattle herds of areas of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho bordering the park, these officials say. Moreover, Mary Meagher, a research biologist, could find no data to support the ranchers' contention that the disease, which can be spread among animals by direct contact, had ever been transmitted from Yellowstone bison to livestock.

The controversy finds the U.S. interior department in attitudes of hostile confrontation. Park officials say they are stoutly backed by the Interior agency, which runs the parks; Ranchers claim the fervent support of the agriculture agency, which presses the anti-brucellosis campaign. It may take White House intervention to settle the rift.

The cattlemen want a brucellosis-free United States by 1976. They say they lost millions of dollars in the slaugher of diseased cattle during an outbreak of brucellosis in the 1950's. Why, they ask, shouldn't the U.S. National park services be compelled to clean up a source of infection?

"Herds were sacrificed all over the nation," said Mons L. Teigen, executive secretary of the Montana stock growers association. "So it does not seem reasonable to permit a reservoir of brucellosis in this area."

Miss Meagher, who has been studying the Yellowstone bison for years insists that bison rarely leave the park. They have strong affinities for certain park areas, she explained in an interview.

Routine monitoring of park boundaries would "reduce to zero the remote possibility that the park bison could serve as the source for cattle infection," she said.

But the cattlemen would not listen. "It was like talking to a brick wall," Miss Meagher complained.

Their proposed brucellosis control program in the park would "destroy the Yellowstone bison as a free-ranging wild population with unique esthetic and scientific values," she said.

Miss Meagher said there was no evidence that brucellosis had any ill effects on the Yellowstone bison, which are increasing slowly. Extermination of the Yellowstone herds would not eradicate brucellosis, she said, because the organism had other carriers, including rodents, biting flies and ticks.

Her skepticism about the transmission of brucellosis from bison to cattle was challenged by Dr. Gerald D. Robertson, a Boseman, Mont., veterinarian. "I feel very certain bison do transmit brucellosis to cattle," he said.

However, L. Roy Houck, president of the national buffalo association, who raises buffalo commercially for meat on his ranch near Pierre, S.D., said, "It's never been proved that bison have the same strain of brucellosis as is found in cattle."

GERM-CARRIERS? These American buffalo, in Yellowstone National Park, are feared by ranchers who think they may carry brucellosis bacteria, which in domestic cattle can be economically fatal. Park officials and conservationists, however, think otherwise. (New York Times Photo)

Science Minister Boosts Canadian Research

By JEFF CURRUTHERS
Special to The Times

OTTAWA — Federal Science Minister Alastair Gillespie favors the development of centres of research specialization in Canadian universities.

And more specifically, Canada should have a centre for Arctic studies and several centres of specialization in oceanograpny, in light of Canada's growing interest in the oceans.

Such centres of specialization would help avoid duplication of research effort in universities; would allow the bringing together of a critical mass of research experts, to work on specific problems; and would be particularly valuable from the point of view of national need.

"My own view," Gillespie said in an interview, "is that we should definitely move forward with centres of specialization. It would be an important step forward."

The concept was one of three main topics discussed by science ministry officials at a closed seminar attended by presidents, or their representatives, from the country's 19 largest universities.

They are being given a look at — and asked their views about — policy proposals developed by the science ministry on basic research, centres of specilaization, and federal funding of overhead costs associated with research at universities.

The science ministy is expected to propose the policies in final form to the government in these three areas in the coming weeks.

If the government were to accept a program of creating centres of specialization in research an universities, it would represent an important and marked shift in federal policy for funding research in universities.

Traditionally, the federal granting agencies have funded individual researchers and research projects.

With the centres of specialization concept, increasingly larger amounts of money would also be devoted to supporting teams of scientists, perhaps whole university departments or schools, for specified types of basic research related to identified national needs.

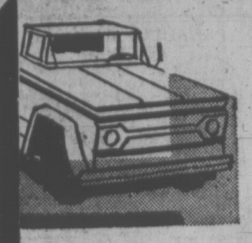

In a presentation to the university presidents, Dr. Maurice L'Abbe, vice-rector at the University of Montreal, noted that "one of the best ways to create and maintain" such centres would be to incorporate in universities, or associate closely with universities, research units of the federal government.

At the same seminar, Dr. H. E. Petch, assistant secretary for planning in the science ministry, said he personally believes that "all universities cannot expect to excel in all fields of research; some degree of concentration and specialization is essential if funds are to be used to their greatest effect."

Both Petch and L'Abbe noted that major problem facing the centres of specialization concept will be working cut jurisdiotional arrangements between the federal and provincial government, since such a concept is part of the larger education system controlled by the provinces.

Dr. Andre DesMarais, assistant secretary of programs in the science ministry, said a federal policy of paying indirect costs associated with federally-financed research in universities would affect university financing in general and the fiscal transfer arrangements between the federal government and the provinces.

The provinces might have to readjust the way they distribute funds to universities, to prevent possible inequalities developing between large and small universities that could in turn affect the quality of education, if such a federal policy were accepted.

PERSIAN RUGS

The Immortal Art which comes in the Immortal Persian Carpets

Few possessions so proclaim one's position and importance in the world as a Persian rug. Weaving is one of the most ancient of the arts. Its essence began in 700 B.C. At that time shepherds actively were engaged in raising lambs and goats. They distributed the raw materials (wool) to the homes of different families in small villages of Iran. Each family sat and wove their own individual pieces resulting in different stories, ideas, abstract patterns and linear designs being conveyed into the carpets. You could get your rug from a collection of over 400 pieces at the Annual Checkup Can Be Costly

Preventive dentistry, say the experts, is the answer to tooth decay.

A typical checkup includes: examination, $5.00; x-ray, $11.00; cleaning and flouride treatment, $14.00. A spokesman for the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons says the present fee schedule set in 1972 is under revision and is expected to rise at a rate of 6 per cent annually.

He is horrified by the growing number of young people who decide to economize by having teeth, that could be filled, extracted.

This dentist believes the whole approach to dental care must change drastically.

He describes private practice as "medieval." He pointed out that his x-ray machine which cost $1,900 is used only three or four times a week. "That one machine could serve 15 dentists."

Such necessary, but often little used, equipment adds to the cost of dental care. About 50 per cent of a dentist's earnings are paid out in business expenses, says the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons.

Dental equipment has high cost, low usage

"There are groups of dentists sharing equipment and expenses but the savings are passed on to the group, not the public," said one local dentist.

He says, "people need to start thinking in an imaginative way to combat tooth decay." He would like to see foods taxed according to their sugar content.

Although the dentist says "more and more people can't afford dental care" he believes fees are fair when "the outrageous cost of dental supplies and equipment is taken into account."

For example, a young dentist opening a two-chair office will have to invest $35,000.

The cost of some materials can also be prohibitive. A composite filling, used in cosmetic dentistry because it resembles tooth enamel, costs patients "twice the official price of gold" per ounce. The dentist estimates that the cost of the ingredients, however, is about 50 cents.

"Dentists are collecting agencies for large corporations," he said.

He points out that the training of a dentist is more expensive than any other profession. Because of this he believes dentists should be used mainly as teachers and supervisors of auxiliary personnel.

Cavities: The Whole Picture

Tooth decay and colds are the two most common diseases affecting Canadians.

But many people don't realize that cavities — unlike colds — can be prevented.

Dr. David Parfitt, director of the dental program for school district 61, says most caries (tooth decay) can be prevented by following the rules of good oral hygiene and a diet low in sugar content.

During the past year, 26,999 children were examined by the Greater Victoria School Board's dental staff. As a result of their examinations, almost one in four of the children they saw (4,672) were referred to their family dentist for treatment.

School dentists stress preventive dentistry. They use slides, films and lectures to educate children in good oral hygiene which will prevent most diseases of the teeth and gums.

They also give demonstrations of toothbrushing and the use of dental floss. Parents will want to know that even the recommended three-minutes of careful toothbrushing is not enough. A toothbrush reaches only half of the tooth's surface area.

For this reason, dentist recommend using dental floss which cleans between the teeth and the area close to the gums.

Flossing removes plaque, a sticky substance which builds up on teeth and harbors colonies of bacteria.

Many of these bacteria form an acid when they come in contact with sugar. The acid takes calcium and phosphorus from tooth enamel leaving a decay-prone soft spot.

This process occurs 10 to 15 minutes after sugar enters the mouth. Because of this, children should brush their teeth immediately after meals and snacks.

Dr. Parfitt claims frequent sweet snacks are far worse than one big feast of candies or desserts.

His three children used to get a Friday night treat of soda pop and candy but avoid sweets the rest of the week. The children, now in their early twenties, "all have teeth in good condition with a minimum of fillings."

"The total amount of sugar eaten is less important than the frequency," Dr. Parfitt said.

He would like to see fluoride added to Victoria's water supply. However, he believes that unless legislation requiring a 60 per cent majority on fluoridation referendums is changed, "B.C. will continue to lag behind other provinces in percentage of the population drinking fluoridated water."

Dr. Parfitt suggests that parents give their children fluoride drops or tablets and have a dentist paint the teeth with fluoride.

Meet 'To Exchange Agonies'

NEW YORK (UPI) — To help one another, persons with a history of mental illness exchange agonies at a special kind of meeting.

They describe their fears — afraid to meet people, afraid to ride in an elevator — the gamut of phobias.

They also talk about their anger and hostility over life's frustrating, seemingly trivial matters. Afraid to express such anger or hostility in a controlled fashion, some on the road back from severe mental illness might just become withdrawn again. The extreme state of withdrawn, the catatonic state, puts a mentally ill person in what seems like a constant trance.

Such talk goes on during meetings of the 925 Recovery Inc. groups nationwide. Each group has no more than 30 members. The ideal size is 15 to 20 members.

Extended Period

There are around 15,000 members — half of whom have been sick enough to be in state mental hospitals for extended periods. Some have been in more than once. Recovery Inc. is a self-help association of nervous and former mental patients.

Robert Farwell, executive director of Recovery Inc., said in an interview that at such meetings "We deal with the trivial aspects of life, the frustrating things that lead to anger and lack of self-confidence."

The latter can be just as much a problem as uncontrolled anger. Program a person with an intense lack of self confidence and pretty soon he or she will be paralyzed by his or her fears.

Farwell said there were about 580 recovery units nationwide in 1966; by 1971 the number had climbed to 808; and this year at latest count there are, as noted earlier, 925 units.

Farwell, of Chicago, said the growth is connected with the changes in treatment of mentally ill patients. Now there is within the state hospital system, practically in all states, after care and preparation for re-entry into one's community and home.

Off Grounds

"In some states," Farwell said, "the recovery unit operates just off the state hospital grounds."

A survey of 1216 recovery members showed that 20 per cent had two to four hospitalizations; five per cent had five or more hospitalizations; one-half had been hospitalized at least once.

The survey was done by Dr. Hanus Grosz, professor of psychiatry at the University of Indiana school of medicine in Indianapolis.

It showed that one-half of the respondents listed "housewife" as occupation. Farwell said the survey also showed a high percentage of married women with children.

Of the remainder, many occupations were listed. Farwell said members include businessmen, secretaries, community and government leaders, lawyers, teachers, doctors, factory workers — literally people from all walks of life.

Many Recovery members have been referred by psychiatrists, psychologists, physicians, hospitals and clinics. Some refer themselves. That's a good first step. Farwell said it's good to admit you need help if you can't handle life's tensions. Symptoms of nervous attacks may include heart palpaitations, dizziness, sweats, numbness, tremors, fatigue, depression, chest pressure.

They include all the fears and obsessions, compulsions and bizarre thoughts, fear of eating or choking. Farwell said underlying all these are the basic fears of mental and physical collapse.

Farwell said Recovery Inc. was founded in Chicago in 1937 by the late Dr. Abraham A. Low. He was professor of psychiatry and neurology at the University of Illinois and second in command of all state hospitals.

He took the worst patients, according to Farwell, and tried out his conviction: nervous and former mental patients need training in self-leadership.

He made progress. Some of the patients returned to the hospital. Many others, through recovery self-help meetings and the exchanging of experiences, got a good enough grip on life to improve.

The study by Grosz showed the median income at $8,000. Only 10 per cent had incomes of more than $16,000. Some have no income, so there aren't any dues. At meetings, a collection plate is passed.

Crime Does Pay For This Woman

HALIFAX (CP) — Perhaps crime doesn't pay. But writing about it is rewarding work for Mrs. Bowen Judd, who turns out mysteries here in the quiet of a tree-shadowed cottage set back from the water on the Northwest Arm.

Under the pen name, Sara Woods, she keeps her fans supplied with fresh exploits from the annals of her barrister hero, Sir Nicholas Harding, and his partner Anthony Maitland.

Mrs. Judd, a tall, grey-haired, middle-aged Englishwoman, is on her 21st book now. You won't find her novels on every newsstand with the Erle Stanley Gardners or Simenons, but most local libraries have at least a few. About 9,000 copies a year each are sold in Britain; the U.S. market is nearly as good.

The books are all set in England. At the heart of each is the British legal system, almost a life-long interest for their Yorkshire-born creator.

The daughter of a Bradford wool merchant, Mrs. Judd acquired her fascination with the law from her eldest brother, a solicitor who died in the Second World War. His contagious enthusiasm led her to read law as a hobby and to work in a law office.

"Quirks of the law are my main interest," she said in an interview, and her books contain terms like "embracery" which despite its sound has nothing to do with making love.

"I think we've got a pretty good legal system in England," said Mrs. Judd.

"It's absolutely ready-made for a mystery writer. You don't have to strain to get the situations. You can graft any number of plots onto the barristers' chambers."

Mrs. Judd's career as a novelist began years ago before she came here with her husband in 1958.

Fear, Ignorance Curb Appeals

OTTAWA (CP) — Welfare applicants who could appeal decisions concerning them often do not because they lack information on the right of appeal or fear the results, says a study released this week by the Canadian Council of Social Development.

The study also says that although all provinces and the Yukon Territory have provision for appeals, the procedures do not yet operate fully and there are parts of Canada where those who request assistance are not told of benefits available to them.

The 138-page study prepared by the independent organization concludes that entitlement of people to receive assistance should be entrenched in provincial statutes.

Reuben Baetz, executive director of the council, said in releasing the study, that legal rights of people to benefits must be clearly stated and welfare appeal groups should include recipients of assistance.

"In some parts of the country applicants and recipients feel it is useless to appeal because they have no faith in the system, or because it is too time-consuming," he said.

In evaluating the performance of the appeal boards, the council examined the objectivity of the board members, the access to boards by the applicants, effectiveness of the system in overcoming delays and in measures to minimize the effects of the wait for assitance, and cost of the boards.

The study said there are some situations in Canada where applicants are not told of benefits available to them and about the right to appeal, but "are being subjected to moral judgments and often treated rather cavalierly by workers."

"One gains the impression that in some jurisdictions at least, the cavalier treatment of clients is a deliberate policy in the hope of keeping expenditures and caseloads down and in the hope the problems will go away," the report says.

Class of '47 Celebrates

The September 1947 graduating class of Royal Jubilee Hospital celebrated its 25th anniversary last weekend. Twenty-five of the 33-member class from around Canada and the United States attended a luncheon, dinner and tour of the hospital and city.

NO SMILES FOR THIS BIRDIE

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. embassy has warned the government's military intelligence branch to watch for communist terrorists who may be using Japanese-made cameras converted to guns with silencers, South Vietnamese sources said Friday.

"The 'cameras' are Japanese-made Yashicas adapted to be guns," the sources said. "They are capable of shooting five rounds of 5 mm dum-dum bullets at distances from 30 yards."

A U.S. embassy spokesman denied any knowledge of the report but Vietnamese government intelligence sources said it had been made available by American officials in Saigon.

It would be the first time in the war communist terrorists had used such tactics in the South Vietnamese capital.

Reliable U.S. sources also said today the U.S. mission in Saigon has ordered a crackdown on news leaks to correspondents in Saigon.

The embassy was said to be concerned about the recent disclosure of certain psychological warfare tactics against North Vietnam including air drops of radios and mock currency over the north.

Recital Given

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Josif Brodsky, the poet who was exiled from the Soviet Union for what officials termed "social parisitism," gave his first poetry reading in the United States this week. Brodsky, 34, was one of Russia's most popular poets in the early 1960s. He fell into disfavor and was exiled to the Arctic in 1964. After being granted a visa to go to Israel, the Jewish poet came to the United States last summer.

The not-so-secret word in Victoria right now is SYMPHONY . . . Everyone's talking it . . . extolling it . . and looking forward to what promises to be the greatest musical season ever . . . not to mention the greatest social season centered around the Victoria Symphony . . . with parties and fashion showings now, preluding the main events . . . Big dinner at the Empress on Oct. 1st and gala opening performance the following evening . . . complete with red carpet, spotlights . . . and all the attendant excitement! . . . The shoes to complement your evening gowns . . .

Beautiful evening dresses cry aloud for pretty shoes . . . and "pretty" is just one of the adjectives we'd apply to the new fall evening shoes we saw at Munday's this week . . . Others would be "chic" . . . "elegant" . . . "feminine" . . . not forgetting the important "comfortable" . . . One of Munday's best-selling evening shoes is a plain pump in either gold or silver mesh . . . cool and dainty . . . very dressy . . . very much liked by women who don't favor sandals . . . Another very pretty evening shoe is a mesh sling with a gold band set with rhinestones across the vamp . . . We like a new Bandolino sandal in gold or silver kid . . . or black suede . . . which is cut high in front, and is particularly-fitting . . . and a D'Antonelli sandal with criss-cross straps and sling back . . . This one, too, comes in silver or gold kid, and in black suede . . . Seems to us this silver-gold-black combo could take care of all one's evening needs! . . . Prices are around $30 . . . Finally . . . for a tall woman who wants a very low heel . . . or a young girl in search of an inexpensive dress-up slipper . . . there's a pretty shoe by Daniel Green . . . in either silver or gold lame . . . Two tones of eye shadow are more interesting than one. Do a little experimenting yourself.

How to keep your man healthy this winter . . .

Don't let anyone ever tell you that men's underwear isn't pretty darn important . . . not at this time of year when it's starting to get chilly and will soon be wet and cold . . . and our menfolk, bless 'em, will likely still be tooling around town in their ubiquitous raincoats and not much else in the way of protection against sneezes and sniffles! . . . What can you do about this without seeming to be a fussy female? . . . Just quietly buy your man some of that terrific Meridian underwear from England which Wilson's sell in vast quantities this time of year . . . It's pure cotton knitted in a special way so that it has the soft, cosy feel of wool . . , in fact the more you wash it (by machine, yet!) the softer it gets, finally ending up feeling like cashmere! . . . It's lightweight, absorbent . . . very he-mannish in a creamy, natural color . . . Comes in singlets and boxer short at $2.75 each . . . a short-sleeved shirt at $4 . . . and ankle-length drawers (modern version of the "long-handled" underwear of yore) . . . $4.50 . . . Naturally we haven't worn any of this underwear ourself . . . but we're assured by every male who has that it's absolutely the greatest! . . . Warmth without bulk . . . and from your point of view . . . no special care needed . . . just throw it in the machine with the rest of the laundry! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

The flash and fire of diamonds . . .

Most of us women dream about one day owning a diamond necklace . . . Some of us actually do . . . and others have a good chance of wish-fulfillment . . . Well, here's a dream-destined-to-become-true for some lucky lady . . . maybe for Christmas if not before . . . the gorgeous diamond necklace we saw at de Goutiere's last Wednesday . . . It's an estate piece . . . worth a great deal more than the $2150 price tag . . . Diamonds of various sizes flashing like fire . . . in a bow design with drops, on a slender white gold chain . . . Go feast your eyes on it! And if you're looking for an interesting man's gift, see de Goutiere's car pictures . . . collages of vintage cars made up entirely from the works of clocks and watches . . . dials, cogs, wheels, etc. . . . set in a gilt frame . . . These are hand-made . . . extremely clever . . . and would; be nice in a den or a man's office . . . $42.50 . . . Getting back to jewellery . . . we saw a lovely tapered cable neck chain . . . 18K gold, priced at $124 . . . Sapphire and diamond rings (for a September birthday girl) . . . A sweet little circular pin . . . white gold leaves with a cluster of tiny diamonds and sapphires at $110 . . . and an unusual 3-stone ring . . . two blue sapphires centered with a yellow sapphire . . . set in white gold . . . $360 . . . de Goutiere, Jeweller, Ltd., 2524 Estevan Avenue, 592-3224.

Sweaters are everywhere. For every hour of the day—or evening. The sweater set is back in style.

Handsome handbags from Florence . . .

That "fine Italian hand" one reads about . . . often with a sinister connotation . . . is evidenced in a literal and benign form in the handsome purses and bags just arrived at Eaton's Import Room from Florence . . . where so many beautiful things are made with tender loving care! . . . The craftsmanship of these bags is superb . . . and the leathers are of the finest . . . As for styling . . . well, as we said, they're handsome . . . roomy . . . terribly smart . . . unmistakeably European! . . . One beauty is a combination of suede and kid . . . with convertible handle and a unusual clasp fastening . . . navy, brown or black in this . . . More casual is a brown calf over-the-shoulder bag in either brown or luggage tan . . . And a more conventional bag for the conservative woman who likes her accessories elegant but inconspicious . . . is a large-ish envelope bag . . . with a handle which can be lengthened to wear over the shoulder . . . Black, brown or garnet . . . Then there is a whole series of tapestry travel bags . . . in a beige shade with dark brown leather trim . . . Totes in several sizes . . . some with separate outside zippered compartments . . . A drum bag . . . deep tote you could carry your shoes and all your bits and pieces in . . . team this with the large matching over-the-shoulder bag and you're all set for anywhere . . . Eaton's Import Room, 382-7441, local 242.

Mix your metals . . . Gold and silver jewellery is now being worn at the same time.

The wonderful TV world of color . . .

We never realized until we acquired a color TV a couple of months ago how much we'd been missing! . . . Re-runs of shows we'd seen in black and white took on completely new dimensions . . . Fact is, color TV has finally come into its own . . . those "bugs" we all used to talk about as an excuse for not owning a color TV have been ironed out . . . and now . . . with all the new fall programs starting up . . . sports programs and spectaculars . . . you're only getting half the show if you don't have color . . . Color's here . . . and here to stay! Even TV Guide which used to indicate which programs were in color has now done a switch and only tells you which ones are black and white! . . . So . . . if you don't already own a color TV . . . now's the time to go shopping . . . At Standard Furniture where the range of color TVs is not only good but terrific! . . . Standard has a great line of various models . . . at prices to suit everyone's budget . . . Can camels be beautiful? . . .

Having had several face-to-face confrontations with camels in Morocco last winter . . . we're in a position to tell you that the hair of these beasts looks a lot better on people than it does on them! . . . At any rate, camel hair has always been considered something pretty special in the way of fabrics . . . Soft, luxurious camelhair . . . in various weights . . . makes up many of the new fall clothes at Wilson's which visitors and local people alike are raving over these days . . . Coats warm enough for the coldest winter days are tailored to perfection . . . in classic styles as well as the new Vogue-ish wrap-around with wide notched lapels which strikes just the right note of casual elegance . . . 'Emotional War' Claims One More

After Four Years, Marriage Is Over

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sad news came last month. Two friends, a man and a woman who live in another city, sent word that their four-year-old marriage was over.

A card came in the mail, in the same kind of envelope their wedding announcement came four years ago. Even the print was similar, elegant but serious, as if this was a stylish event and no hasty midnight drive to divorce court in Splitsville.

The couple has two children, one large house, an income of $20,000, two cars that don't work and two personalities that lately haven't been working either.

I've seen each of them since the announcement came, both insisting the problem was not a marriage of convenience suddenly gone inconvenient, nor did either of them meet somebody new — "where are all these new somebodies?" the wife asked. A good question.

The main fact both agreed on was that their marriage had been more a format than a relationship they lived alongside each other, never with each other.

This particular union was killed by none of the classic bullets usually found when marriages go to the execution line: infidelity, drunkenness, infantilism. But bullets flew between two people nevertheless, part of an emotional war that reflects the illnesses of 1970's America as much as any war of bombs.

In both kinds, most of the victims are filled with innocence and their lives are worth caring about.

The husband is better known to me, and if either of the two could have kept the tight wire of marriage from going slack, it would have been he. He pulled hard on important necessities: spending time with the children, being open with his in-laws, encouraging his wife to do "something outside." When he married, he told friends that he loved his wife "because she's the most remarkable girl I could find."

Not a Person

The trouble may have started there. He saw his wife not as a person with strengths and flaws.

She was a consumer item, the most striking product on the marriage shelf when he happened into the market. He picked her the way a car is bought: sleek lines, ample style, a supplier of comfort and a worthy beauty to be seen with.

Now he's divorcing her, issuing a recall notice now that the warranty has run out and the defects have become a bother.

At first, it seems a mystery why he didn't try, as the Irish grandmothers counsel, to "work it out." Wives and husbands emerge, like plants, if they are given time, but what kind of a chance is four years?

It is easy to understand why marriages break up after 10, 15 or 20 years. Usually the two have divorced after trying to live under any number of truces, but the war went on nevertheless. Gratefully, rather than continue to mutual destruction, they part and often go on to find separate happiness, well-deserved because they worked hard to find it in the first marriage. Divorce was a last resort, not a first resort.

Yet there is really no mystery why the husband didn't try to work it out. Nothing in his background, whether from his teachers in school or parents at home, prepared him for the sacrifices in marriage. He couldn't let his wife work out her flaws because that demanded the sacrifice of time and patience.

He knew about, and gladly made, the sacrifices to get on his college football team — where he blocked like a terror and he made the sacrifices to get ahead in his corporation. But sacrifice in marriage? No one ever told him that.

Best-Kept Secret

It is a waste that we go through years of schooling never being let in on the best-kept secret — not that marriage can involve anguish and boredom but that, when the pain comes — the "for worse" part — it doesn't automatically mean defeat. The test of a marriage is whether the husband or wife can fall in love with each other a second time.

I knew the wife only after the marriage. With a year of it behind her and one child, she told friends she needed "a challenge." Before marrying, no doubt raising a child was an ample challenge, but once the tedium set in—well, a new challenge was needed.

She went out and easily found one — they are all over the lot — and this kept her going for a time. One of the side benefits of America's deterioration is that new causes pop up like spring mushrooms. We're no sooner finished boycotting grapes than here comes lettuce.

I forget which causes received the attention of this wife — clean rivers, minority hiring, the vanishing whale — but it is worth wondering whether the child at home, with a new baby sister, was receiving the attention he needed. The husband paid $80 a week for a nanny to care for the children while his wife was out caring for clean rivers.

It is currently bad form to suggest that women should run the home, but is it impolite to ask why so many liberation-minded mothers hire black women and Spanish women to run the home for them? Why not care for your own children and thereby adopt the cause of maid liberation?

The break-up came when the husband discovered his wife was a flawed product, and that he had no skills of sacrifice to meet it. The wife made a discovery too: that the world needed her, not only her husband and children.

The parting, as the announcement in the envelope suggested, was civil. It's too bad. Maybe if they fought a little, screamed and cried, they could have gotten some of the confusion out of themselves and dealt with it in the open. Now, if either remarries, the same buried passions are ready for an unglorious resurrection.

Three out of the last five weddings I've been to have ended in divorce, forcing me to adopt a new policy: no gift until the marriage lasts four years. If it's not worth their trouble to stay together that long, it shouldn't be worth mine to visit the jeweller for a silver doodad.

Not Unpoetic

This isn't to be unpoetic. In fact, a poem comes to mind, "Les Sylphides" by Louis Macneice:

. . . So they were married — to be the more together —
And found they were never again so much together,
Divided by the morning tea,
By the evening paper,
By children and tradesmen's bills.
Waking at times in the night she found assurance
In his regular breathing but wondered whether
It was really worth it and where
The river had flowed away
And where were the white flowers.

ON THE BUSES —WITH A SKIRT

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Busdriver Betty Closson wheels her bus down the main streets of this city the same way as six others in the 31-member force — in a skirt.

"They're still not used to a woman bus driver," said the pretty blonde mother of five.

The new municipally-operated public transportation system here has women drivers who operate the same 40-passenger, diesel buses as men.

The same is true in nearby Mississauga where Edward Dowling, general manager of Mississauga Transit, said: "Our girls are all married . . . and we find them just as reliable as men.

"In fact, our two most senior drivers are women."

Hugh Feenstra, the Oakville Transportation manager, said he deliberately invited applications from women drivers as well as men.

"I had read in trade magazines that women remain more alert after long hours of driving than men.

"Women also have very good safety records as operators of school buses."

Mrs. Closson spent six years on school buses before joining Oakville Transit.

"Even in rush hours, I prefer driving the town bus," she said.

"You meet a lot of nice people and work a regular shift.

Racketeers Evade New Act

MONTREAL (CP) — Racketeers have found loopholes in almost every clause of Quebec's Consumer Protection Act, says Lieut. Leo Talbot, head of the Montreal police fraud squad.

While the act requires several types of vendors to obtain government permits, used car salesmen, door-to-door peddlers, travel agents and real estate brokers continue to operate in Montreal without them, he said.

NDP's Problem With Women . . .

OTTAWA — The New Democratic Party, like other political parties, has "some difficulty in finding women candidates," NDP Leader David Lewis admitted to a female questioner this week at the University of Ottawa.

In fact, added Mr. Lewis, "many of our female candidates are not so worried about being defeated as about being elected." Most have responsibilities elsewhere, such as at home or in a career.

"I usually console them by telling them there's not much to worry about in that regard," Mr. Lewis quipped.

The female questioner had asked for Mr. Lewis' views on what she regarded as an NDP tendency to "put women in ridings where they are bound to lose."

She pointed to the Ottawa-Carleton riding where she said Justice Minister John Turner seems to have things well under control and where the NDP had put up "lesser-known" Doris Shackleton.

Mr. Lewis countered by saying that candidates run where they choose and pointing to the more well-known Pauline Jewett running in Ottawa West.

Milk Is a Nuisance But Not So Serious

DEAR ABBY: This is going to sound stupid, but I have to know. Can a girl who is not pregnant have milk in her breasts? I am 16 years old, not married, and I am a virgin, but I could nurse a baby with all the milk that's leaking out of me.

I discovered it when I was doing the routine monthly checkup for cancer or lumps in the breast. My cousin was with me and she was as shocked as I was. She thinks my mental condition could have something to do with it. No, I am not crazy, but my mother is pregnant and so is the woman next door. I also have a cousin who is nursing her baby.

Can this be a mental thing? I don't know what to think, and don't know who to ask.—Anonymous, Please.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: According to a documented article by J. D. Ratcliff (Reader's Digest, May, 1972), you don't have to be pregnant, married, or even going with anybody to have milk in your breasts. You don't even have to be a girl! (Yes, males have been known to have milk in their breasts!) Don't worry about it. It's temporary, and a bit of a nuisance, but it's not serious.

DEAR ABBY: Much has been said and written about careless brides who are late with their thank-you notes — or worse yet — never get around to acknowledging their gifts at all.

How about the other side of the coin? I refer to people who say to a bride (or groom), "I've got a gift at the house — drop by and pick it up, will you?"

This happened to my daughter (at her wedding reception) believe it or not!

I think to ask a couple to go "pick up" a gift is the height of rudeness. What is wrong with people like that?—Father of the Bride.

DEAR FATHER: In most cases, they are either ignorant or they just don't care.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WONDERING: One who considered having a marriage without sex should also consider that it could lead to sex without marriage.

Better Schooling 'Cure for Chaos'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Institutions for schooling, now "anchored to the past and present," must become more efficient if man is to control change and choose his destiny, Dr. Walter Worth of Edmonton said Friday.

Dr. Worth, Alberta's deputy minister of advanced education, said "institutions for schooling are being left stranded in obsolescence and functioning more from habit than conviction."

If society is to avoid chaos, the learning process must become more responsive and more efficient, he told the annual convention of the Canadian Education Association.

Dr. Worth said each of the three modes of learning — the institutional mode which is common to most schools and universities, the membership mode common to adult education, and the autonomous mode of drop-out centres and educational communes — must be restructured.

"Tomorrow's learning transaction must be responsive to situational factors: The characteristics of the learner; his objectives and those of society; the nature of what is to be learned; and the human and material resources available."

He said the institutional mode must give more attention to programs, content and purposes.

With better planning, teachers will have more time to motivate students, select conditions for learning and assess student performance, Dr. Worth Said.

"Taken as a whole, this sequence of events leads to more efficient instruction than is generally being achieved in classrooms at present."

In the membership mode, he said learners should not be dependent upon an institutional authority and a less formal, more functional arrangement of learning should be provided.

In the autonomous mode, "the learner should be the authority on the objectives, content, methods and effectiveness of his learning," Dr. Worth said.

"He should take over the direction of his learning, assuming control over whole sequence of decisions that will be made in the course of attaining his goal."

'Serious' Auctions Eyed For Good Fund-Raising

The first Collector's Choice auction held in 1964 to raise scholarship money for the National Ballet School, cleared about $20,000. The last one cleared about $35,000.

Mrs. J. F. Barrett says it takes about two years to organize the auction, and about 600 to 800 items. This year's auction is being held Oct. 12.

Mrs. Barrett says she got interested in the auction idea after she became a one-woman committee in search of scholarship money for the ballet school. The school takes students who audition across the country, and gives them a full grade school and high school education as well as ballet training.

No Money

"I found there is no scholarship money available from corporations and foundations because they're geared for college level. On an individual basis I found people sometimes didn't want to risk money on a child who looks good at age seven, but might grow too tall or too heavy or not look so good by 14 or so. It's one reason they are given a good education, so they aren't in a dead end."

She searched for a way to raise funds less directly, and came on the auction idea.

"I thought, surely it's easier to give a thing from your house that you mightn't want, than it is to give money. It's so common now that it doesn't seem odd, but it did then. People told me no one would give us anything worth having."

The first auction drew a 19th-century copper wine ewer that sold for $50, an early Canadian part dinner service in ironstone that sold for $900, a Nova Scotia cherry Pembroke table that sold for $250, paintings and sketches including some Group of Seven.

"You can auction about 100 items in two to three hours. If you're Sotheby's, handling million dollar diamonds, you might sell more. We aim at 2½ hours, because people begin to leave.

'We decided that unless an object was worth over a certain amount, there is no good taking up the time to auction it. Time equals money, so we prefer not to auction anything less than $35."

Sarnia Child's Farm Top Tourist Attraction

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — One of the most popular attractions in this industrial city is the children's farm at Canatara Park.

It is a favorite spot for children of Sarnia and its surroundings and also for tourists.

The farm-like setting houses many gentle domesticated animals. The children are able to observe the animals in a natural environment. They are also allowed to feed them and to pet the less timid ones.

Many of the park inhabitants have been donated from Lambton Country farms and some of them are year-long residents.

Entrancing Skill Keeps Him Busy

TORONTO (CP) — To get an appointment for hypnotherapy with Dr. Daniel Glick you would have to wait until next May.

That's how the sideline of this family physician has picked up since he read about the science of treatment by hypnosis while thumbing through a magazine in a barber shop 10 years ago.

Dr. Glick, on the University of Toronto's faculty of family and community medicine, uses hypnosis in the control of pain, diagnosis and treatment of psychosomatic aspects of illness and in treating patients for drug and smoking addiction.

While there is skepticism about hypnotism in the medical profession, Dr. Glick says that "people who have investigated and read widely on hypnotism are not skeptical."

"Anyone who has collected all the evidence on hypnosis in the past 30 years will come to the conclusion it must be used in medicine today."

Dr. Glick, who began in the field by using hypnosis to control pain, says it can remove pain completely in such illnesses as cancer.

"With a terminal illness it can help a patient to enjoy life to the last instead of being reduced to a vegetable through pain-killing drugs."

A patient can be taught to control pain by self-hypnosis, Dr. Glick says. This technique of self-help also is effective in control of an appetite or a habit.

He has treated patients for drug addiction — marijuana, LSD and speed — and says most have responded.

He also holds group clinics every two months for people who want to stop smoking cigarettes.

Ape Capers Supplant Rabbit Habit

New York Times

NEW YORK — What's a magician to do when he tires of pulling rabbits out of his hat?

Nick Carrado, a muscular former marine, faced that problem 16 years ago, when he was 25. He had been doing the rabbit act since he was eight, and the challenge had worn off, so he turned to training a chimpanzee. Since then, Carrado said he hasn't felt any return of those old pangs of boredom.

His current protege — and "best pal" — is Kokomo Jr., a five-year-old, two-and-a-half foot tall, 65-pound chimp. The two live together, dine together, vacation together and work together.

A stage and television performer and model, the chimpanzee even has his own TV program, "The Kokomo Jr. Show," a 26-segment situation comedy now being aired in four cities. Kokomo also has done his share of public service work — teaching children not to litter and adults how to avoid heart attacks and has served as chairman of the Leukemia Society's pet division.

Actually there was no Kokomo Sr. Carrado's first chimp also was called Kokomo Jr. "I named them for two marine buddies, Koko and Moe, who were killed in the Korean war," he explained. "The junior is for me."

Carrado recalled that training the chimps wasn't easy. "There were no books and no schools to teach you how to train chimpanzees," he said, "and other people in the field refused to tell me a thing.

"You have to train them as you would a child — with lots of affection and good discipline," he added. As far as the problem of communicating was concerned, that was demonstrated when a stranger commanded, "Send me a kiss" and was obeyed.

By any standard, Kokomo lives well ("No, I won't tell you how much he earns, but he does pay taxes," Carrado said). The chimp has his own room, furnished with bed, chairs, desk, television set, radio and toys, in Carrado's rambling, nine-room New York City apartment.

He even has his own pet, Pepper, an aging German Shepherd and is adept at opening the dog's canned food and feeding him.

Kokomo's shoes and clothes are all custom-made and Carrado sees to it that he gets 12 hours of sleep, some naps and never works more than four hours a day ("Otherwise, he would get cranky").

The two eat their meals together. Kokomo impressed a skeptical visitor with his impeccable manners by eating a dish of blueberries with a spoon and then neatly wiping his mouth with a napkin.

Carrado wouldn't dream of taking a vacation alone and when they travel by plane the two always go first class. They book a suite in a hotel or motel and either order room service or go to the dining room.

ROGUE'S GALLERY of apes offers testimony to the talents of a chimp (or a series of chimps) named Kokomo. The chimpanzee, meal ticket for former magician Nick Carrado, has starred in his own television series, performed on stage and even modelled, in spite of his tender age — just five years. Carrado has been making money from monkeys for the past sixteen years. (New York Times photo.)

The amendment will be considered at the next council meeting.

'I Am a Camera' Message A Straightforward One

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A play that is touching at times but sustains a level of gentle human comedy, opened the Victoria Theatre Guild season at Langham Court, Friday.

John Van Druten's I Am a Camera, based on Christopher Isherwood's stories of Berlin in 1930 is a pleasant exercise in well-defined characterization for at least three of the lead players.

Cleverer and more arresting plays have been written on the same theme — the reponsibility of human beings to one another — but the message here is straightforward and at least poses no problem of comprehension.

Ann Purdon as Sally, and Anthony Jenkins as the "camera," author Isherwood, give a team performance that reflects the considerable experience as well as the talent of both actors.

Dr. Jenkins is also the director of the play, a difficult double assignment that works at some levels but not at others.

For example, in use of the stage, in movement and tableau and relationships within scenes, his competence is unquestionable.

But despite valuable production assistance from Michael Meiklejohn and standin Rosalind Scott, the problems of rhythm and pace that crop up in such circumstances are not altogether solved.

And despite the ability of Jenkins and Mrs. Purdon, there were scenes when there was a sense of constraint and artificially in their performance.

A sound piece of character work is presented by Sheila Reardon as landlady Fraulein Schneider marred only by a tendency to keep her German-English riding in the upper register of her voice.

The slight sub-plot concerned with Jewish Natalia Landaur and Fritz Wendel is carried by two attractive and promising newcomers to the Guild stage — Jutta Woodland and Tony Bukowiecki.

David Hurry plays the usual boistrously brash American (in 1930 with long hair?) and Kay Averill has the brief role of Sally's English mother.

I Am a Camera will be repeated tonight and Monday through Saturday with curtain at 8:15 p.m.

The Polygon Module is the most exciting new leisure home idea in a generation. If you've been thinking of building a new, stylish cabin or summer home, but can't afford it, take a second look! The Polygon Module not only equals or betters the cost of a cabin, but it doesn't tie down your summer weekends in building. It's already prefabricated and all you have to do is put it together which takes only one day and one helper.

What is it made of? The 15-ft. and 20-ft. Polygon Module is constructed of highly durable wood fibre material with a Tedbar P.V.F. film exterior finish for long wear and a latex interior which is washable.

The 25-foot Polygon is manufactured out of two very strong skins of fibreglass completely encompassing a ½" slab of urethane foam. This ¼" slab of foam provides as much insulation as is found in 85% of the homes today.

Theatre School Grows

For those Victorians, juvenile and adult, who seriously desire to have formal training in theatrical skills, the possibilities are expanding this season.

Bastion Theatre School has just announced a new look that will include an additional group of professional instructors as well as a series of courses not previously offered.

A new three-year acting course, for example, is open to any age and will take beginners through extensive study in acting, improvisation, voice technique, movement, dance and mime.

Options are offered in the third year for more intensive study in voice, dance, fencing, mime, movement and judo.

Acceptance for the course is through audition and interview.

The most promising students at the third-year level will be given an opportunity to work with Bastion's main stage and studio productions on a voluntary basis.

Classes begin at 5:30 p.m., Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, Oct. 30-May 26.

Another new two-year course open to any age will meet the demand for backstage and production training.

This course will provide students with experience and skill in set, costume and property design and construction, stage management, theatre lighting and sound and administration.

Weekly seminars will be given by residents and visiting experts in these fields.

Acceptance will be through interview and timetables will be set to suit the student and normal working hours.

Some voice training and movement will be added to intermediate studies for the 12-14 age group and there will be once-a-week classes for adults with limited time.

Instructors include Margaret Martin who will conduct an introductory course in acting and drama appreciation for seven to 11-year-olds.

On the theatrical arts instruction team will be the studio company artistic director, Colin Gorrie, who is also a trained architect.

Newcomers will be Mrs. Valerie Lewis, a RADA graduate from London, England, with a diploma in vocational teaching. Mrs. Lewis teaches creative dance classes at the Gordon Head Community Centre and at Camosun College.

Early registration is advisable for all classes as enrolment will be limited. For information call Bastion offices at 382-4112.

'Professional' More Than Label

But one of the few recorded occasions when he erupted is told by Abe Burrows in Howard Teichmann's book about Kaufman.

Librettist of the musical, Guys and Dolls, Burrows had been working on the show with Kaufman Broadway's greatest collaborator and play-doctor.

By reason of attending a prolonged religious ceremony as an onlooker, Burrows was an hour-and-a-half late for a midnight work appointment with Kaufman.

He was greeted with an explosive "How can you be such an amateur?"

"Look," said Burrows, "it's a bar mitzvah you know . . ."

"You're an amateur! How can you waste your strength on foolishness?"

That Kaufman considered the intrusion of a social life upon any part of a 24-hour work schedule as "amateurish" would be regarded as extreme by most people.

But maybe it's just one of the things that made Kaufman an all-time great in the professional theatre world.

NO GUARANTEE

For being a professional is much more involved than simply turning an avocation into a dollar-earning vocation.

The artist who proclaims himself a pro immediately leaps a considerable distance up the ladder and immediately becomes in the public mind, an expert, a person of specific and profound experience, a craftsman as well as an artist.

And so he is in general terms.

But it is a common mistake on the part of the layman to suppose that the label "professional" guarantees a quality performance considerably above the level of any amateur.

In more than 30 years of looking and listening I have seen amateur stage productions that shone with talent and freshness and could only have been improved by the technical efficiency of the pro.

But I have also seen professional productions that were so lack-lustre or so over-gimmicked technically that they were a dead bore.

The same thing is true of musicians and dancers. There are degrees of quality fading to a level of mediocrity even under the pro banner.

In fact most critics would agree that the mediocre level is by far the most populous and that as we rise toward the top plateau the ranks thin out drastically.

This is natural as great talent is rare, and superior training and experience hard to come by. The latter is particularly true in the theatre world.

But apart from talent and training, an important factor is the true professional's attitude of application and concentration that means his vocation is the first order of business at all times.

Kaufman's scathing — and probably unjustified — remark to Burrows expressed that factor. Like many totally dedicated people Kaufman could work around the clock for days at a stretch and expected the same output of energy from others.

DISCIPLINE VITAL

The real point is that to make a good professional the strict discipline of hard training is essential.

This is something that was hard to find in Canada at one time but it is becoming increasingly available as more scholarship and grant funds are established and more training centres open.

One of the notable benefits bestowed on the people of this province by the late Social Credit government was the establishment of the $10 million dollar cultural fund.

Through this, badly needed training facilities have been either founded or given a more stable existence; producing organizations like orchestras, choirs, theatre and ballet companies have been able to move up from a borderline existence and the artistic health of all communities has greatly improved.

Mention of which brings to mind how well the fund was administered from its inception by former Speaker and fund committee chairman, William Murray.

Always approachable, sincerely concerned in the promotion of the province's well-being and progress in artistic affairs, he played no small part in bringing about the successful realization o fmany worthwhile concepts such as last summer's season of Victoria Symphony concerts and Bastion Theatre projects.

New Master Qualified

In Britain the Royal Academy of Music and the Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra are two of the most respected and traditional musicial organizations of many that are among the world's best.

Derek Collier, new concert master of the Victoria Symphony has been prominently associated with both.

The London-born-and-trained artist resigned his post as professor at the Royal Academy when he came to Canada.

He had also been concert master of the Bournemouth Symphony, longest established of British orchestras.

He had been guest concert master for various London orchestras including the Royal Philharmonic.

He has performed with all the major orchestras as soloist and under the batons of such conductors as Sir Malcolm Sargent and Sir Adrian Boult.

Festival Progressing

The 1973 Greater Victoria Music Festival plans are already well under way for the event which will take place during the two weeks of April 2-14.

Syllabus listing festival regulations more than 500 classes and test pieces is now available at Western Music, 1108 Blanshard, or Hall and Fairfield Music Centre, 728 Fort Street.

Chamber Music Ensemble Returns

Chamber music concerts, 40 minutes to an hour in length, were a highlight of Sunday visits to the Greater Victoria Art Gallery last season.

The performing group founded by Lawrence de la Haye, was the Ars Nova Ensemble, five professional artists who were occasionally joined by guest soloists.

Sunday afternoon at 3, the Ars Nova Ensemble returns to the gallery with a program which is the first of seven scheduled monthly events.

Personnel of the ensemble has changed in the interim with the exception of clarinettist de la Haye and violist Zdenek Kriz.

The violinist will be Lila Collier, accomplished wife of the new Conservatory of Music string department head and Victoria Symphony concert master, Derek Collier.

Others are Linda Daniels, cellist and Aurelle Biggs, pianist.

At Sunday's concert, which is sponsored by the Musicians' Union trust fund, music to be performed will include a Divertissement for cello, clarinet and piano by Vincent D'Indy; Scherzo from Sonata for cello and clarinet by Phyllis Tate; Song Without Words for cello and piano by Mendelssohn, and the Beethoven Trio in B-flat Major, Op. 11 for cello, clarinet and piano.

Other concerts will take place Oct. 15, Nov. 26, Jan. 21, Feb. 11, March 25 and April 22. The October concert will feature the Victoria Woodwind Quintet.

There is no admission charge for this series.

BRYAN'S BEAT

By BRYAN HAY
Times Staff

There comes a time in every columnist's head when he has to beat down the idea that a pun is better than a paean.

And, that is the internal struggle I've been having with myself for the past week over an Elektra album called NICELY OUT OF TUNE (EKS 74099) by a British group tagging themselves Lindisfarne.

From the beginning, my mind was mulling all kinds of highly improbable permutations on the title — none of which would have done justice to the product . . . and only served to flatter my own ego.

I'll settle for saying that Nicely Out of Tune is nicely in tune with the present placing of my head.

The material dished up has — as is often the case with unknowns — overtones of many groups and many places musically-speaking.

Especially pleasant is some of the instrumental gimmickry displayed in some of the tracks which shows that these five lads have paid a lot of dues over the early years of their careers.

They have the same irreverent approach to much of their material that marked the Bonxo Dog band with exactly the same throwaway craftsmanship — but this is not to say that they should be dismissed as strictly lightweights.

There is more than a hint of the Incredible String Band and Donovan in some of the cuts and I found myself from time-to-time flashing on early Traffic, when that group still had its original concepts of obligation to audience.

●

That great subcontinent anchored in the Pacific down near the bottom of the world has produced a wide variety of talent ranging from Helen Reddy to the Beegees.

Unfortunately, Australia has also produced its share of duds.

And one of these happens to be an aggregate of so-called musicians masquerading as a pop group under the broad title of the Southern Contemporary Rock Assembly.

The only connection these people have with rock seems to be that the man who took them into a studio must have had a large one in his head.

Their waste of acetate is available on Atlantic and is tagged The Ship Aloum (SD 7235-0598). And, in part, it seems to follow along with Atlantic's reputation as a Soul label.

Some of the cuts are a throwback to bad 50s R and B. It's only a pity that they weren't thrown back — way into the Outback!

There's nothing darker than a White group trying to come on Black — especially when they don't have the adrenal fluid to do it properly.

This ship should have been scuttled before launching.

●

Even though it's been around for a couple of months now, this seems the appropriate time to comment on Valdy's album COUNTRY MAN (A&M HL 5101).

Valdy is a Victorian; but, just because his product is home-grown stuff, that in itself is not reason enough to freak over it.

What is reason is the fact that it stacks up — and stacks up well — with anything else on the shelves.

And, I'm not alone in saying that: The coast-to-coast and U.S. chart success of his single Rock and Roll song says it better than I can.

What's more, any album on which I can find only one weak track rates as a winner in my book.

Valdy's music — like so much Canadian product these days — is soft, mellow and country-influenced.

Main reason for mentioning Valdy today though is to gear you up for a little goofie next weekend. Valdy and several other people will be gigging at the Club Tango and this seems like a good time to pass out a few plaudits to a local boy who is really cooking.

Fall Symphony Season To Introduce New Faces

Six weeks after the close of a phenomenally successful summer season of 27 concerts, Victoria Symphony Orchestra, with music director- conductor Laszlo Gati on the podium, returns to the Royal Theatre stage Oct. 1 and 2.

Being rested after the six-week break is a very different condition to being totally unravelled after a six-month hiatus as in past seasons.

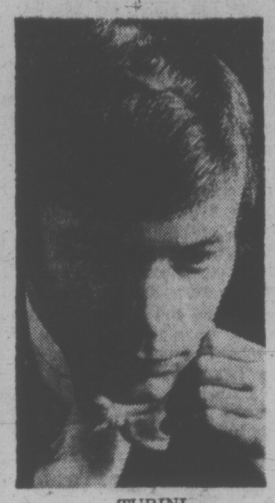

The continuity provided by this year's first summer season will undoubtedly be reflected for habitual symphony goers by an enhanced quality in the opening concert pair.

Vacancies within the orchestra have been filled with gifted and experienced players, pre-eminent among them the new concert master, Derek Collier.

Also appointed head of the strings department at Victoria Conservatory of Music and string specilaist at the University of Victoria, Collier is noted as a distinguished virtuoso performer, teacher and orchestra leader.

Brilliant, sensuously romantic music of Tchaikowsky, so splended in its orchestral color and melodic images, comprises the first progrm whose featured solist is the world-acclaimed Canadian pianist, Ronald Turini.

Turini is making a return visit after his memorable appearance last season when he performed a third "symphony benefit" concert with the orchestra.

TURINI
. . . return visit

All three of the concerts as well as his solo recital achieved over 90 per cent capacity audiences.

Hailed as having taken Glenn Gould's place as Canada's top pianist, Turini has recorded success after success in countries around the world, including Russia where standing ovations have continually greeted him.

When the Victoria Symphony completes its forthcoming season in mid-April it will have played a record number of concerts within 10 months — 62.

These include nine to be presented in the up-Island centres of Duncan, Courtenay and Campbell River and several youth and school concerts in addition to 22 at the Royal Theatre.

TOP PERFORMERS

Appearing with the orchestra during its regular winter series is a fine galaxy of artists, some of whom, like pianist Bela Siki and violinist Masuko Ushioda have appeared here before in memorable performances.

Others are new to local audiences but come bearing impressive reputations — Lauris Elms, a magnificent Australian contralta; Narciso Yepes whose classicial guitar recordings are something very special; Alexei Nasedkin, a Russian pianist of superb talent.

And one of the greatest of all peronalities in the world of violin virtuosos comes in January with two concerts by Yehudi Menuhin.

Arts Council Board To Be Completed

Vacancies for 11 directors are to be filled at the annual general meeting of the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria, scheduled Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Victoria Art Gallery.

The Victoria CAC which was established in 1966, works at co-ordinating activities of 61 affiliate organizations whose total enrolment is more than 6,000 persons.

It also supervises the disbursement of some $15,000 of public funds.

The money represents Victoria's share of the B.C. Cultural Fund. About 25 per cent of the interest from this $10 million dollar fund is administered by 51 arts councils throughout B.C. on behalf of their affiliates.

Other activities of the Victoria CAC include a bi-monthly newsletter, a weekly TV show, arts and crafts exhibitions and sponsorship of the Victorian Days arts ball.

'Equitable Rental' Sought from VFS

Victoria doesn't want to put Victoria Flying Servies out of business but it does feel the firm should be paying a "fair, equitable rental" for using landing float facilities in the Inner Harbor, Mayor Peter Pollen says.

Pollen was commenting on a recommendation of the lands and housing committee that Victoria take out a non-commercial water lot lease from the federal transport department, in respect to the harbor area where the float is located.

If the recommendation is accepted, the facilities will be used for non-commercial boats and aircraft.

The city has been trying for some years to reach agreement with the federal authorities over leasing arrangements.

Leasing the area for commercial purposes would cost between $3,000 and $4,000 a year, Pollen noted, and it was apparent to the city that VFS "would not pay that kind of rent."

Therefore the proposal was to take out a non-commercial lease costing only $100 a year, and this would mean an end to the firm's use.

Fjord Cruises Special Status Symbol

By MARION CLARK
The Washington Post

People who cruise the Norwegian fjords for the most part come back each summer to take the trip again, and in a clannish sort of way they speak of those who cruise the Mediterranean and the Caribbean as tourists of a distinctly different feather. Those cruises attract "a more partying crowd," I was told.

Indeed, while the cocktail hour was in no way sedate on our fjord cruiser, the Incres Line's M.S. Victoria, things became very subdued after dinner. By the time the last North Sea shrimp hors d'oeuvres were snatched from each evening's massive midnight smorgasbord, a major exodus to the cabins ensued. And while one of the ship's four nightclubs remained open promising pizza and dancing "'til the wee hours," only what was referred to as a hard-core group of veteran sailors took up the invitation.

The rest drew the heavy cabin drapes against the midnight sun, set their travel clocks for 7 a.m. (to catch breakfast and an early-morning class on macrame) and slept like veritable seafarers.

Then the ship took on a ghostly mood ... you could steal away to the normally off-limits bridge, gaze out at jagged, bald Arctic mountains, listen to the silence and commune with what must be meant by "God's country."

The sun, in a permanent twilight stage from 10 p.m. until 3 a.m., would reach its lowest point when the ship's chimes rang 1, and the deep sea-filled chasm of the fjord, in teal blue shadows, would turn beautifully eerie. If you were lucky, the Norwegian pilot would ask you into the enclosed part of the bridge, offer you hot tea against the Arctic evening chill, and tell you stories that never ended about what the Vikings were really like.

The Victoria makes five Scandinavian cruises each summer, leaving from and returning to Copenhagen. Two of these, both in July, cruise up the coast of Norway, sidetripping into 13 different fjords on the way to and from the North Campe, Europe's northernmost point, about 600 miles inside the Arctic Circle. Another, in June and again in August, cruises Europe's northern capitals (Stockholm, Leningrad and Helsinki included) and takes in some of Norway's more spectacular fjords on the way.

★ ★ ★

The most adventurous of the five Scandinavian cruises, in late July and early August, is similar to the North Cape cruise but penetrates 390 miles farther than the cape into the Arctic Circle, ending at Spitsbergen near the 80-degree parallel. Most of the five cruises take 15 days each.

Taking the advice of a number of friends, we chose the July North Cape Cruise. We were told we could expect the best weather then in a climate than remains cool and rainy most of the summer.

We were well advised. It rained once during the cruise; we had crystal-clear days in the 70s and low 80s; and when we sailed within the Arctic Circle the area was having a rare heat wave. Temperatures soared to 85 and 88 on two days —"unheard of," the natives claimed — and one sun-swept night at 2 a.m. we swam in the ship's ocean-fed pool, anchored off the North Cape, while on the open deck the chefs charcoal-broiled white fish for us and poured endless spiced Chablis.

★ ★ ★

All was not hedonistic, though. Two hours earlier we had dutifully trudged two miles across the barren, bald cape to reach a windy tip that looked like the end of the world. Over one thousand feet below, the desolate sea stretched north to the Pole and in the paleness of the strangely angled midnight sun the place became faintly macabre.

The desolation of the North Cape was matched in beauty by the thickly-wooded and village-dotted Norwegian coastline farther south. Each fjord, from the Sognefjord (Norway's longest, penetrating 100 miles inland) to the Geiranger (considered the most spectacular) was a narrow, stillwater passageway between towering mountains forested with birches and pines.

We docked almost every day. In Flaam, our first stop from Copenhagen, at the head of the Sognefjord, we boarded a train and took an all-day excursion up the mountains through dozens of tunnels, past the spectacular free-falling waterfalls that seem to come out of nowhere every mile or so all over Norway.

By the time the cruise ended we had been transported by an incredible array of vehicles. At Geiranger, my favorite village, we paid $6 and took a fantastic seaplane ride up the fjord to catch the spray of Norway's famous Seven Sisters Falls; then an old Mercedes brought us windingly up to the summit of the Dalsnibba, 4,950 feet above sea level.

In Tromso, the largest city above the Arctic Circle, we travelled by cable car to a vantage point overlooking the harbor where whaling is the largest industry. And, in Bergen, the home of Norway's famous composer Edvard Grieg, and one of their best-preserved cities, a funicular brought us to the city's park on a plateau high above the shopping district. The majority of our land tours, though, were conducted by bus or taxi. Run by Thos. Cook and Son, most of these excursions were worth the fare. Some, especially the Oslo and Stavanger tours, were not.

In Oslo, where the Victoria docked for 24 hours, you're better off in taxi cabs or using the numerous ferry and streetcar services than on a tour bus.

By the time we reached Oslo, the Victoria's last stop before returning to Copenhagen, we had tired of her cuisine. It may have just been too good. We longed, as is the curse of most Americans, for hamburgers. The ship's kitchen, headed by chef Giuseppe Traverso, produced feasts befitting even the most exaggerated cruise menu stories. Since the entire staff was Italian, our noon and evening meals were always accented by pastas and antipasto. Desserts, brought flaming by a parade of waiters from the "galley," were fantastic, indescribable melt-in-your-mouth creations hinting of meringue and liqueurs.

Two, we were never alerted when we were about to pass by something of particular interest. Nine-tenths of the 500 passengers on board were below deck when we passed the Arctic Circle and everyone was at dinner while we passed through the straits of the Lofoten Islands. This sight was considered by our ship's lecturer, Tom Bartlett, fresh from lecturing on the S.s. France's 90-day cruise around the world, as among the most awesome sights on the globe. We should have had a large detailed map on board so passengers could follow our course, and the cruise staff should have announced via the loudspeaker when special points of interest were being passed.

Passage for the Victoria on the North Cape cruise runs from a minimum of $650 each for two people in a stateroom, to a maximum of $1,900 for a single person in a suite. Our stateroom, on the top stateroom deck, ran $2,200 for the two of us.

Italian-Canadians Band to Fight 'Defamation'

MONTREAL (CP) — About 50 Italian clubs and associations in Quebec have banded together to form the Federation of Italian Associations with the aim of fighting "defamation" of Italian-Canadians.

Pietro Rizzuto, a Montreal paving contractor and president o fthe local branch of the organization, said the Quebec federation would not be affiliated with groups outside the province.

Newfie Park Plan Stalled

By ED WALTERS

The park's 800 square miles of mountains, wilderness, spectacular gorges and miles of empty beaches have not yet been handed over to the federal government.

Resources Minister William Doody of Newfoundland said in a recent statement the land would be turned over to Ottawa as soon as Crown boundaries are surveyed.

Mr. Doody said the previous Liberal government, which completed park negotiations with Ottawa before it was voted out of office last year, failed to carry out a land survey.

The survey now is under way and "as soon as we can identify where the Crown lands are, we'll turn them over to the federal government."

Park Superintendent Don Learmonth said in an interview more than 20 campsites were ready this summer at Green Point, eight miles north of this community.

A walking trail was cut up the lower slope of Gros Mc for which the park is named and at 2,644 feet the second highest mountain in Newfoundland.

WANT UNDERWATER PARK

Another trail was prepared over marshland to Western Brook Pond, one of a series of mile-wide freshwater fjords edged by cliffs 2,000 feet straight up in places.

Last winter 80 men were employed under a federal winter works program to clear deadfalls and brush from the sides of the main road through the park.

Mr. Learmonth's staff totalled 29 in August.

The best outlook now is that full-scale park development will begin in 1974-75 when Ottawa expects to begin spending $2 million annually for five yearss.

Among other things, the money will finance development of 300 campsites—mainly in seaside areas—road upgrading and paving and preparation of trails for visitors who want to spend two or three days on hikes through the mountains.

A long-range dream of planners has been to create an underwater park component in the eastarm of Bonne Bay, all of which is included in the park except for a proposed enclave containing Woody Point and several other communities.

Water is just 40 feet deep at the entrance to the east arm, one of the bay's three inlets, but drops to an unexplored sounding of more than 750 feet inside.

MINI-SUBS POSSIBLE

Midget submarines have been mentioned as a way of giving visitors a means of viewing the depths.

Bonne Bay is rimmed by folds of the Long Range Mountains which bend inland north of Rocky Harbour to form the backbone of Newfoundland's Great Northern Peninsula.

Plateaus atop the mountains are covered in places by sub-Alpine plants. Broken, grey stone on the flat head of Gros Morne and nearby peaks provide cover for rock ptarmigan, known to Newfoundlanders as partridge.

Salmon and sea-run trout travel up Western Brook and other park rivers flowing into the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Some of Newfoundland's 17,500 woodland caribou spend part of the year in high wilderness that falls within the park boundaries. Moose also are seen in the area.

The park's proposed southern boundary is about 40 miles north of Deer Lake, 30 miles east of Corner Brooks on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Quits Campaign

BURNABY (CP) — Walter Davidson, progressive Conservative candidate for Burnaby-Seymour, withdrew Thursday from the Oct. 30 federal election campaign. Davidson cited personal reasons for quitting.

A new nominating meeting will be held today.

India Attacks Deaths From Fire

By RAM SUNDAR
CP Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — A big program to build fireproof houses has been launched in Indian villages.

Peasants are also to be taught modern methods of fighting fires.

The program has been talked about for many years but little was done. Recent disastrous fires in many villages have jolted the administrative machinery into action.

Newspaper reports say more than 20,000 village homes were burned in the southern state of Andhra Pradesh alone. The states of Orissa, Bihar and Rajasthan also have reported a large number of village fires.

Nearly 100 peasants died in these fires. In Adhra Pradesh a family of seven perished.

Since most of the rural houses are built with wood and dried coconut fronds, they catch fire easily. Often, they burst into flames during a heat wave as occurred last June in several hamlets when the temperature shot up to 118 degrees.

MANY HOMELESS

The peasants are too poor to pay for stone houses. So the government has moved in to finance the construction of nearly 500,000 fireproof houses. A third of these will be in Andhra Pradesh, a region prone to heat waves.

The government funds will be channelled through panchayats or village councils. A panchayat is something like a small legislature elected directly by the peasants.

Those who lost their homes during the recent fires will be given priority under the program. Nearly 30,000 peasants have been living in the open in Andhra Pradesh. Many lost all their possessions.

The state governments are also taking steps to ensure that there are fire engines and other fire-fighting equipment for each group of 12 villages.

At present, not even a tenth of India's 560,000 hamlets have any fire-fighting equipment.

Introducing
P&O's new Spirit of London.
A city, gone to sea!

Spirit of London—the world's newest cruise ship—begins 10- and 11-day Mexico Cruises from Los Angeles on January 17. From $370 to $1075.

1. Like a luxury yacht, P&O's brand-new Spirit of London is designed for fun: ultra-modern, a compact 17,000 tons with sunny decks, a sky-high nightclub, swimming pool, a theatre, great shows, entertainment and dancing in the largest showroom on any P&O ship.
Plus cabins with private facilities for 740 passengers.
2. To her rakish good looks, we've added the very essence of friendliness and service—the spirit of London: openness and warmth, cheerful professionalism, charming accents, legendary place names, cozy shops with British goods at duty-free prices.
3. You'll get a choice of continental breakfast in your room or poolside at the Union Jack Bar.
4. Or traditional English Breakfast in The Thames Restaurant, where the menu includes English muffins, scones, kippers, broiled tomatoes, English jams and marmalades, even eggs with bangers or gammon (translation: sausage, sliced English ham).
5. If you'll leave your shoes with your room steward aboard Spirit of London, they'll be shined for you, as in a first-class London hotel.
6. In the Greenwich Room —named after the great observatory—you'll actually be above the Captain's Bridge, in a gallery of windows with a 280-degree sweep of sea. And a Cutty Sark scotch and soda costs only 50 cents.
7. The Churchill Room, located amidships, is the largest showroom in West Coast cruising, with stage and sound facilities comparable to a London nightclub. There'll be topflight professional music for listening and dancing, as well as specialty cabaret performances.
8. Spirit of London will pack the social whirl of an ocean voyage into a few exciting days: the Captain's Cocktail Party, Gala Nights, parties, a Mexican Fiesta, feature movies, music, dancing, deck games, bridge, Calcutta sweeps, even midnight buffets in The Thames Restaurant.
9. Though by all means a lively ship, Spirit of London is also quiet. She's stabilized for smoothness and fully-carpeted throughout, so a little peacefulness is never hard to find.
10. You can spend from $370 to $1075 for Mexico cruise accommodations aboard Spirit of London and, at every price, get an outstanding value.
Individual cabins are furnished to the standards of a first-class hotel, with private shower or bath, multi-channel radio, even pushbutton telephones—no dial!
11. On March 10, April 7 & 11, Spirit of London will sail from Los Angeles on three- and four-day Fiesta Party Cruises—full-tilt London parties to Ensenada and back. Party Cruise fares run from $155 to $320.
12. All in all, Spirit of London adds an entirely new experience to Mexico, Alaska, and Party Cruising: the ongoing traditions and the animating spirit of the most liveable city in the world.
13. To find out how you can sample the Spirit of London, see any travel agent, or send in the coupon below.

British Status Altered by New Election Act

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian citizens 18 years old or over can vote and stand as candidates in the next federal election.

Some British subjects will still retain the privilege of doing both without being Canadians but they have been put under notice that their time is running out.

A revised Canada Elections Act, passed by Parliament in 1970, drops the federal voting age to 18 from 21 and similarly qualifies an 18-year-old citizen to stand for the 264-seat House of Commons.

The new act puts a time limit on the special status of British subjects — which includes persons from all Commonwealth countries and such former ones as Ireland, South Africa and Rhodesia — which has long been embedded in Canadian electoral law. When the time limit is reached in 1975, no non-Canadian will be able to vote or run in federal elections.

British subjects have been allowed to participate in federal elections after a year in the country whether or not they took up Canadian citizenship. Immigrants from non-Commonwealth countries are required to put in a five-year residence period and gain Canadian citizenship before they can do either.

The revised act says British subjects who had a vote at the last federal election June 25, 1968, can retain it until June 26, 1975, as long as they remain residents. But if they haven't taken out Canadian citizenship by that time they lose the right to vote or to run.

PROXIES PERMITTED

Another change this time is that public servants stationed abroad, their dependents and dependents of servicemen aboard to get the vote. Previously this right was extended only to servicemen and their wives.

Normally, a person votes for a candidate in the riding where he was "ordinarily resident" when enumeration takes place, starting 49 days before election day. But the 1970 changes make it easier for a person moving at election time or away from home on a temporary job to cast his ballot.

Anyone moving to a new home between enumeration and voting day may apply to revising officers or enumerators for permission to vote in the new riding.

A person away from his ordinary residence because of his job may vote in the riding where that job is located if he has been there since the 20th day before election day and will be there past that day.

It is restricted to fishermen, mariners, prospectors, ill or incapacitated voters or full-time students unable to vote at either advance polls or on the regular day in ridings where they live.

AFFECTS STUDENTS

The person wishing someone to vote in his stead must sign a form authorizing the specific proxy voter, who must be a qualified voter from his own riding, to cast his ballot. For someone who is ill, there must be an affirmation by a doctor; for a student, there must be a statement by a registrar that he is a full-time student at the institution.

Proxy forms must be submitted to returning officers before 10 p.m. on the Friday before the Monday voting day.

No voter may be named as a proxy by more than one other voter. Any proxy voter retains the right to vote in his own name.

The proxy system ends the right of full-time students to be enumerated either in the riding they called home or the one where their school is located.

This time they will be listed where they are ordinarily resident — with parents or guardians unless they are really "on their own" and no longer regard the family home as their home. Wherever a married student lives with his wife is considered their place of residence.

JUDGES CAN'T VOTE

Anyone expecting to be unable to vote in his riding on the regular election day may use the advance polls, held on the Saturday and Monday nine days and seven days before election day.

Those 18 and over barred from voting are:

- Returning officers in each riding, except when a vote is required to break a tie.
- F e derally-appointed judges.
- Anyine serving a sentence in a penal institution.
- Anyone restrained of his liberty or deprived of management of his property because of mental illness.
- Anyone disqualified from voting for corrupt or illegal electoral actions.

MARK TRAIL

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Weeks ago, I stepped on my pup's foot. He hollered and limped on it a while but gradually seemed to get better. But I have been noticing that the leg isn't as straight as the other one. How much calcium a day should I give him to help it heal better? He weighs about 20 pounds now.—M.F.

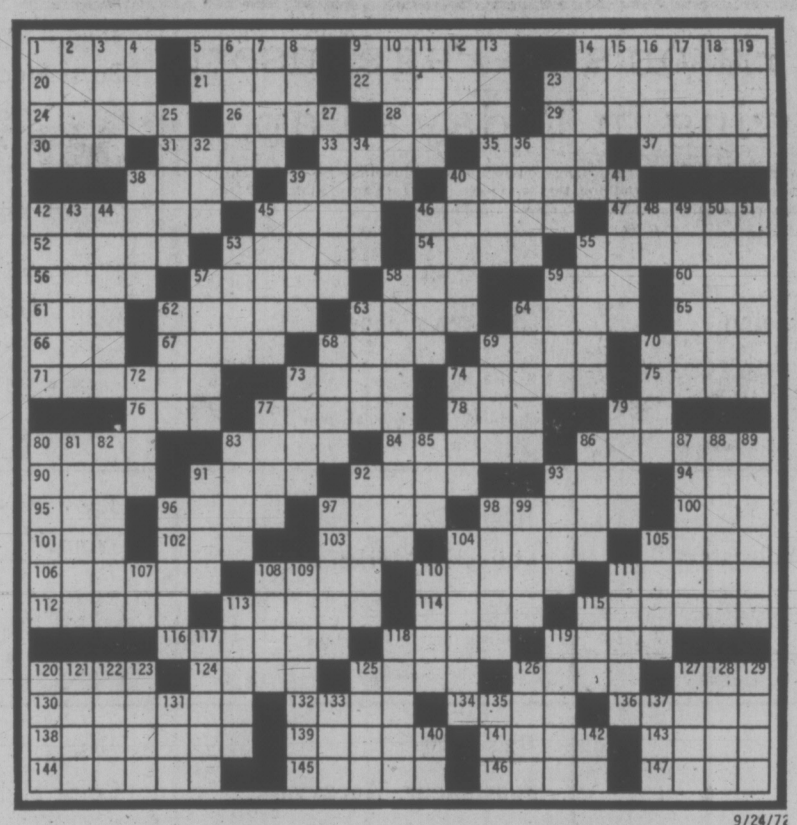

DEAR M.F.: Calcium by the bottle won't straighten that leg out. Nor, in fact, does extra calcium, above the normal requirements of the body, appreciably speed bone healing, anyway. Presumably, your pup's leg was indeed fractures. Possibly the fracture was healed, but incorrectly, and needs to be rebroken and set properly. Or perhaps the bone hasn't healed at all. This, the doctor must determine. Proper healing is obviously more difficult to achieve at this late date. But the longer you wait, the higher the odds you dog will be permanently crippled.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: I'm finding my new Leaf fish very fascinating pets except I don't like the idea of having to feed them those poor, live guppies. What substitute food can I provide for them?

DEAR T.P.: Unfortunately, your Leaf fish aren't likely to accept substitutes. Guppies are their natural food. If you expect to keep them, you have to go along with their choice.

Religion Blots Soccer Scene For Scotland

GLASGOW — The Munich massacre of Israelis at the Olympic Games has climaxed a period of politics interfering with sports in the worst possible way. International competitions have been increasingly used as platforms where bitterly opposing factions have managed to obtain maximum publicity for their respective causes.

Anyone who believes now that politics and sport have nothing to do with each other in the prestige-hungry sports world of the 1970s is simply basking in old-fashioned sentimentality.

But politics is not the only thing to ruin a sporting scene. Religion can be another bitter issue. This is very much the case in Scotland's largest city, Glasgow, home base of the two world-famous soccer clubs, Rangers and Celtic. Glasgow's population of one million is mainly Protestant but the city has a large Catholic minority, many of whom are descended from Irish immigrants who poured into the city during the latter half of the last century.

* * *

And Rangers' own support has been mostly Protestant while the majority of Celtic supporters are Catholic. The religious tag is something the two clubs have been trying to steer clear of. But there is a small minority among the spectators following both clubs who use their "support" for Rangers or Celtic to voice strong feelings on both religion and politics.

This has led to trouble in the past and whenever outbreaks of hooliganism with sectarian undertones have arisen among rival spectators, both clubs have been quick to denounce those involved. Both clubs have been active recently in trying to control this hooligan element. There has been little real trouble in recent years — nothing compared to the riots which are an all too frequent feature of South American football.

Yet there are those who insist on trying to fan the flames. When Celtic were recently involved in a Scottish League Cup match in the provincial Scottish town of Stirling, some Celtic supporters opened up with chants purporting to support the Irish Republican Army.

At half-time manager Jock Stein, one of the most famous club bosses in Europe, moved in amongst them and told them to stop. They did, and Stein was cheered by other Celtic fans.

* * *

And Mr. Willie Waddell, Rangers' general manager, told his players they were to walk out of any supporters' club functions at which "party" songs were sung.

However, when Glasgow's magistrates came up with their own suggestion to alleviate the problem, the clubs seemed to side-step the issue. The magistrates' proposals were not new but they were controversial. Rangers, they suggested, were to make a statement declaring they were not a sectarian club while Celtic were asked to remove the controversial Irish Republican flag from their ground.

At a meeting called by the magistrates, Mr. Waddell made a statement on sectarianism, which was later made public. In it, he said: "There is never any talk of sectarianism within Ibrox Stadium (the Rangers' ground). "If people come in and make use of sectarianism then that it their responsibility but I can assure you there is no talk of sectarianism at board level, management level, or player level."

Celtic turned down the request to remove the Irish Republican tricolour at their ground. In a letter to the magistrates, Celtic chairman Mr. Desmond White explained the club's reasons. He said the flag was part of Celtic's display of flags of many nations and this included the Union Jack which, incidentally, received pride of place. The Irish Republic, he continued, was a friendly country and as many Celtic supporters were wholely or partly of Irish ancestry they might have every right to feel slighted if the tricolour were singled out for removal.

He added: "One aspect of the flying of the flag does, however, seriously perturb the board. It has been suggested to us that the flag is in some way a focal or rallying point for a certain unruly element within our support. We genuinely do not believe this to be the case. If ever the contrary were proved then the board would undoubtedly consider taking down the flag."

* *

Mr. White also pointed out the war records of those associated with the club which would seem that there was a suggestion that the club's first loyalties were to the Irish Republic and not to Scotland or to Britain. "Let me make it clear," he said, "that Celtic is primarily a Scottish club. We are proud of our Scottish heritage."

Granted, Celtic's exploits in Europe have brought glory to Scotland on the soccer field but there is a section of their support, albeit small, who seem more interested in waving the Irish flag than the silver saltire of Saint Andrew (Scotland's national saint).

Scotland's Protestants and Catholics live and work in complete harmony and it is sad that the final links remain, as yet, severed in soccer. Scotland is rightly proud of its soccer tradition. It is the second-oldest football country in the world and it was Scottish teams which developed the "passing game" almost a century ago.

So, apparently, the bad as well as the good traditions die hard. — FWF

A home and its entire contents were devastated this week after a faulty heating blanket short-circuited. It had been left on all morning, said a spokesman for Saanich fire department.

The inhabitants of the house, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Fenner, Mr. and Mrs. Allan J. Caldwell and two small children were not home at the time of the incident. The house is located at 559 Kelvin Rd., in Saanich.

In the matter of expense

The thought that bereavement should impose a financial burden upon anyone is not a pleasant one. At Hayward's Funeral Chapel we are prepared to serve anyone from any walk of life. It is not necessary to join a so-called "Society" in order to achieve minimal expense.

At Hayward's we respect each family's financial circumstances, and we provide the type of service you prefer. We will discuss costs fully and frankly at any time with no obligation.

We stand ready to serve the family's wishes, quietly, sympathetically, with efficiency and dignity.

WAS HE ALIVE? Controversial photo shows North Vietnamese soldier falling from U.S. Army helicopter. Illinois school teacher said picture was taken by a friend from another helicopter, and shows enemy soldier being hurled to his death after refusing to answer interrogators' questions. The army says the man was already dead, and that the allegation that he was thrown out alive came from a fake account of the 1969 incident written by a U.S. soldier to his girl-friend.

Uganda Strikes Into Tanzania

KAMPALA (UPI) — Ugandan forces crossed the border into Tanzania today and battled a combined force of Tanzanian troops and Uganda exile guerrillas, a Ugandan military spokesman said.

However, Tanzania denied there was fighting within its frontiers. A government spokesman in Dar-Es-Salaam said the military command in the alleged battle area just across the border from Mutukula, southwest Uganda, reported "everything is quiet."

The news came as African leaders launched desperate diplomatic attempts to head off open war between the two nations. There have been several border clashes and Ugandan planes have bombed towns in Tanzania.

Complicating the situation for the Arab world was the reported arrival in Uganda of 400 Libyan troops armed with Soviet and Chinese weapons. Their transport planes had been turned back by the Sudan when they landed to refuel. The moves created a diplomatic crisis between Sudan and Libya. The planes later flew on to Uganda by a different route.

A Ugandan military spokesman in a broadcast from Kampala said Ugandan forces crossed into the neighboring East African state during the morning.

"There has been very hot fighting between the Uganda army and Tanzanian troops and guerrillas," he said. He said Joshua Wakholi, a former minister in the government of deposed president Milton Obote, had been captured.

The spokesman said there had been heavy casualties on the enemy side. He blamed President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania for the crisis.

"It would be a good thing if Nyerere himself was killed instead of innocent people," he said, calling on the Tanzanian leader to withdraw his forces.

Further complicating the situation was the plight of Asians who have been expelled from Uganda by the Adi Amin government. Airlines stepped up flights to Britain carrying the Asians who were driven out on grounds they exerted too much control on Ugandan business and industry.

The renewed fighting came only hours after Nyerere appealed to President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to intervene personally in the Uganda-Tanzania dispute, according to a Cairo report by the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram.

Diplomatic sources in the Egyptian capital said an Egyptian presidential envoy was already en route to either Dar-Es-Salaam or Kampala for talks aimed at patching up the dispute.

The diplomatic offensive followed radio reports from Kenya and Tanzania Friday night that Libyan transport aircraft carrying 400 troops and a supply of Soviet and Chinese weapons had arrived in Uganda.

The Libyan men and arms were intercepted Wednesday in Sudan. But Al Ahram said Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiry reversed his decision to cut off the shipment "due to the people's and army's resentment" at the move.

UGANDANS ARRIVE

TORONTO (CP) — The first Ugandan refugees — a young married couple and their grandmother — arrived in Canada Friday night, exhausted after 18 hours of flying via London from their East African home, 8,000 miles away.

The young couple was too afraid of retaliation against families and friends still in Uganda to permit their names to be used.

"It would be a privilege to have my name published," said the husband, a 33-year-old insurance clerk. "But members of my family are remaining there. There might be trouble."

He said he had seen Asians shot dead since President Idi Amin issued the expulsion order for 60,000 Ugandan Asians holding British passports.

The two are the vanguard of thousands of Ugandans expected to make their home in Canada.

Martial Law Clamped On Philippines

Times News Services

MANILA — President Ferdinand Marcos formally proclaimed martial law throughout the Philippines today in the face of what he called a conspiracy to overthrow the government by violence.

The president made the announcement in a country-wide broadcast 17 hours after government troops in a pre-dawn swoop closed newspaper offices and radio and television stations.

He said an attempt had been made Friday to assassinate his defence secretary, Juan Ponce Enrile, who escaped unhurt when bullets riddled his limousine.

The Philippines cut communications with the outside world earlier today for the first time since gaining independence from the United States 26 years ago.

Marcos said he had ordered the arrest of "those directly involved in the conspiracy to overthrow the government by violence and subversion."

The president did not name those arrested, but at least 20 persons were rounded up early today — including one of his most outspoken critics, Senator Benigno Aquino, secretary-general of the opposition Liberal party.

The president said Filipinos would be temporarily restricted from going abroad. Exceptions would have to be authorized by the government.

In declaring martial law, Marcos has gambled that his people will agree with him that the Communist guerrilla threat justifies suspension of democracy in the Philippines for the first time since independence.

For more than a year, Marcos has held out the possibility of imposing martial law if the Maoist New Peoples' Army continued to grow stronger. His critics have charged that he deliberately exaggerated the Communist threat in order to lay the groundwork for authoritarian measures.

Tanaka Shades Nixon

By JOHN BURNS
Special to the Times

PEKING — When the date of President Richard Nixon's visit to China was announced, The People's Daily reserved space for the item at the bottom of its front page. But Friday, when it announced that the visit of Japan's prime minister, Kakuei Tanaka, would begin on Monday, the paper threw its reserve overboard and accorded the item pride of place at the top of the page.

By giving bigger play to the Tanaka story the editors of the Communist party journal were giving expression to a feeling that has been palpable wherever Chinese have gathered in the past few days — that the prospect of rapproachment with Japan is even more exciting and dramatic than the pursuit of detente with the United States.

To the ordinary Chinese the Nixon visit was a spectacular but remote event. He may have grasped its political significance, but he could scarcely feel touched by it in a personal way, for America and Americans have always been a distant and relatively unknown quantity to him.

The same cannot be said of Japan and the Japanese, whose encroachment on Chinese territory began towards the end of the last century and culminated in the brutal occupation of Manchuria in which 10 million Chinese are said to have died.

It is no wonder then that Tanaka's five-day visit is an event which engages the feelings of the Chinese people, just as it does those of the people of Japan, who are said to place the normalization of relations with China ahead of all other priorities in their national life.

Tanaka has already said that he will begin the visit by apologizing to Premier Chou En-lai for the misery visited upon China by Japan. That

Strangler Loose In Ont. Town

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — An at-dusk attacker who police believe may be mentally disturbed has prompted dozens of calls from anxious parents responding to a police call for public vigilance.

Two teen-aged boys have been choked into unconsciousness in episodes 11 days apart and the normal Friday-night complement of eight police officers was augmented by five more in an attempt to catch the culprit. One officer said the attacker may have thought he killed the boys.

Police said extra night men also are scheduled for next week.

Chief Harold Basse said it is feared a young man "with psychopathic tendencies of some sort is on the loose."

In the first incident at dusk on Sept. 10, a 13-year-old boy was in his backyard firing paper clips with an elastic band. An older youth grabbed him from behind and pushed his hand over the boy's mouth. He said he had been hit by a clip.

After the victim passed out, the attacker released him and disappeared.

The second incident Thursday at 8:15 followed the same pattern.

A 14-year-old boy was in front of his house when a youth described as between 16 and 19 years old with long brown hair accused him of throwing something at him, Chief Basse said. The attacker grabbed the boy by the throat and "cut off his air until he passed out." When the boy revived, the attacker was gone.

Crash Kills Sidney Woman

A Sidney woman was killed and the pilot of a light aircraft was uninjured when their plane crashed near Nahmint Lake, 15 miles west of Port Alberni, this morning.

A spokesman from the Rescue Co-ordination Centre said the plane, a home-built amphibious craft, piloted by Dick Thuillier of Sidney, was reported overdue Friday.

The search was hampered by bad weather through the night and it was resumed this morning when the destroyed aircraft was discovered by a Canadian Forces helicopter from Comox.

Scholar Denied Entry

TORONTO (CP) — A Marxist scholar, hired by York University in Toronto and on salary since July 1, has been refused entry into Canada from England.

John Saywell, dean of arts at York, was informed Friday that Istvan Meszaros, 42, would not be given a visa to enter Canada as a landed immigrant.

He had resigned a senior post at the University of Sussex, where he had been teaching for six years, to come to York.

University officials had no idea why he was declined entry.

"Somewhere along the line, someone has flagged him as a security risk," said Dr. Saywell. "I don't know what happened but we're still trying to get him here."

Dr. Meszaros was a member of the 1956 provisional government in Hungary and fled to Italy that year when Russian Stalinists took power. He now is a British subject.

He is a Marxist theorist, literary critic, political scientist and teacher of philosophy and ethics.

Later, federal Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey said he will intervene in the case.

Squad Fights UIC Cheating

OTTAWA (CP) — The Unemployment Insurance Commission announced Friday it has launched a broad-scale attack to combat cheating and other abuses in the unemployment insurance plan.

UIC chairman Guy Cousineau said the commission is recruiting 80 investigators to delve into suspected cases of fraud. Twenty are already on the job and the others are to be at work by mid-November, bringing the total number of investigators to 307.

"There's much more to come," Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey said of the program.

Prime Minister Trudeau has mentioned abuse of unemployment benefits several times on the Oct. 30 federal election campaign trail.

He said Thursday in Winnipeg that government concern over the abuse is why more inspectors have been hired to track down fraudulent claimants.

The announcement came in the wake of charges by Conservative leader Robert Stanfield that the state of the unemployment insurance plan, as it now is operating, constitutes "a national scandal."

Mackasey said the Conservative leader "hadn't the faintest idea what he is talking about," and that he would "put the record straight" in a series of campaign speeches across the country.

Cousineau said the new program will also involve 26 major employers on the West Coast who have agreed to help the commission track down insurance claimants who turn down "legitimate job offers."

LOTTERY LAWS TO BE STUDIED

Lotteries in B.C. are likely to be subjected to a fresh set of regulations under the new NDP government, a spokesman for Attorney-General Alex Macdonald indicated Friday.

Dr. Raymond Rogers, Macdonald's administrative assistant, said the attorney-general's position on lotteries is that the laws governing them should be examined.

Earlier, Premier Dave Barrett said his party is in favor of provincial lotteries, but he declined to specify when B.C. might start one of its own, or who would be the beneficiaries of the profits.

Trudeau, Lewis Clash on Open Line Radio Program

TRUDEAU

Special to The Times

Trudeau, who was a guest on the program, accused the NDP leader of raising during the election campaign the "phoney issue" of corporate ripoffs to mollify the waffle wing of his party.

Within minutes, Lewis was on the telephone to the program, charging the prime minister with distorting employment statistics and with painting an unfair picture of the motivations of those without jobs in Canada today.

A caller to the program had said that Lewis has shown federal incentives to corporations — the NDP leader has called them "corporate welfare bums" — haven't worked to provide the number of new jobs needed.

The caller said that corporations receiving the incentives in the form of grants or deferred taxes establish plants in one area providing new jobs, while closing down operations in another so that there is no real net gain in jobs available.

Trudeau retorted that the NDP during discussion of the white paper on taxation, which would have if implemented, brought in laws "tougher" on corporations did not support the government when it was pressured not to be so tough.

The prime minister said the reason for the NDP silence then was that the party was having difficulties with its waffle wing and is now "creating the phoney issue of corporate ripoffs" to appease this wing following its expulsion from the Ontario party.

Lewis, reached by the radio station denied the issue is a phoney one, and stated he regards it as "a very major and basic issue for the welfare of Canadians."

Prompted by Trudeau, Lewis agreed that more new jobs have been created in Canada than in any other society, and the prime minister thanked him for being honest.

But the NDP leader said he is more concerned about the number of jobs which have not been created in Canada.

Trudeau said that so far during the campaign he has met many employers who insist there are jobs available, and asked Lewis if he agrees that Canadians are becoming more selective of the type of job they will take to get off unemployment insurance.

"I don't think that you are, in my opinion, putting it in a fair way at all," said Lewis, pointing out that a Canadian Manpower survey has disclosed that for every job available, there are 10 or 12 Canadians looking for work.

"You are trying to suggest," he told Trudeau, "and I hope you don't intend to, that there are jobs enough for more than 500,000 unemployed, and that's clearly wrong."

"There are not enough jobs for 90 per cent of the people," Lewis snapped.

After Trudeau stated that three-per-cent unemployment is regarded as acceptable, and repeated that Canadians are becoming more selective in taking jobs, Lewis told him that the way he was putting the issue "really distorts it."

Even if there were 45,000 to 50,000 jobs available, this would leave more than 400,000 unemployed in Canada.

Trudeau retorted that this would have the effect of dropping the unemployment rate from its present six per cent to about 4.2 per cent.

Just as the two party leaders' discussion was becoming more heated, the program's moderator cut them off for a commercial break.

The Liberals have rejected the idea of a television debate among the party leaders as was held during the 1968 campaign, and Friday's brief encounter was the first direct confrontation of a sort so far in this campaign.

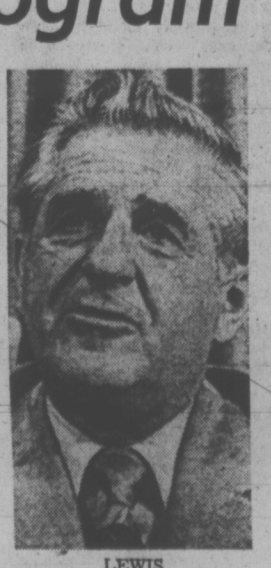

Today, Prime Minister Trudeau takes his western tour to Vancouver, then rests Sunday and Monday with no campaigning. Progressive-Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield goes east, visiting Fredericton, Charlottetown and St. John's, Nfld., today before also taking a two-day break.

Lewis is in London, Ont., today and Toronto Sunday. Social Credit Leader Real Caouette is scheduled to begin another swing through the prairies on the weekend.

UVic Team Researches Arctic Dump

By DAVID CLIMENHAGA
Times Correspondent

A plan by a Canadian mining company to dump mine tailings in a Greenland Fjord has been studied, and a safe dumping system designed, by two UVic scientists.

Oceanographers Jack Littlepage and Derek Ellis were employed this summer by Cominco — the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada — to design a tailing dumping system for the company's giant new Black Angel mine in Greenland.

Littlepage said they were hired to show the company how to get rid of the tailings with the least damage possible to the environment.

"We want to predict and control what these things will do," he said.

He said that during their research for Cominco they discovered that layers of clear water, natural tailings and plankton sit in northern fjords like cake and icing in a layer cake.

"Tons of tailings," the flour-like crushed rock left after minerals have been processed out of stone taken from the mine, will be dumped into the fjord, he said.

Cominco officials said the lead-zinc mine scheduled to open in late 1973, would extract 1650 tons of rock daily from the steep rock faces of the far northern fjord.

The mine, located on the west coast of Greenland, will employ 250 to 300 people, and ship concentrate crushed at the site to European smelting centres.

★ ★ ★

Company officials said they have no idea how many tons of tailings will be dumped.

Dr. Littlepage said there are three basic ways mine tailings can damage the environent.

The tailings may still contain minerals, lead and zinc in this case, in small enough particles to be absorbed by plant and animal life.

The concentration effect, as seen with mercury and DDT, can result as larger animals eat small aniimal and plant life that have absorbed the heavy metals.

Waste material will bury and kill any plant and animal life on the bottom of the fjord.

Littlepage said nothing can be done to prevent life on the bottom from being buried and destroyed.

Clear water, however, can be preserved by encouraging the tailings to sink rapidly to the bottom, he said.

"We want to keep the tailings out of the top thirty feet or so," he explained.

Getting the tailings to the bottom as quickly as possible also prevents minerals from being absorbed by marine life, he said.

Littlepage and Ellis showed Cominco where to place the tailing outfalls to prevent the tailings from floating or escaping the fjord.

Littlepage praised Cominco for asking for consultation from oceanographers before the outfall installations were built.

"Usually its 'we're going to dump tomorrow,' " he said.

The first tailings will be dumped when the mine opens in 1973.

Ellis and Littlepage were flown to the Black Angel site in July by Cominco to work on the tailing-dumping ssysem.

In their short time at the site, less than two weeks, they studied water turbidity—the amount of dirt in it, temperature, salinity and the amount of oxygen with a testing device consisting of electronic probes on the end of a submerged cable.

While doing this research they discovered the layered effect in the water, Littlepage said.

★ ★ ★

The pair were consulted by Cominco, Littlepage said, because of an independent research project they did, mapping mine tailings in Quatsino Sound from Utah Mine's Port Hardy mine.

He said they found they were able to follow and check the make-up of tailings from the mine by analysing the particles in the water.

That study led to the Cominco project.

HOSPITAL DEFENDS ABORTION RULING

The decision to allow abortions to be performed was made by the board of directors of Victoria General Hospital with the community in mind, acting executive director John Murray said Friday.

Murray said he wants to make it clear why the board decided to allow abortions at the hospital, which under its former operators, the Sisters of St. Ann, did not offer the medical procedure.

"The question has never been whether or not the board of directors approved of the principle of abortions, nor is it the function of the board to approve or disapprove of each case," Murray said.

"The decision to be made by the board was, considering that they were directors of a hospital owned by the public, and operated by a public society with public monies, whether they had a moral right to refuse the use of the facilities by a qualified physician who had convinced a group of his peers that the health of his patient required the termination of her pregnancy.

"The decision of the board of directors was simply that they did not have the moral right to refuse the use of a public acute general hospital for any legitimate medical procedure performed by a qualified physician," Murray said.

Murray said the board took four months to decide on the abortion issue and that it was "a very careful decision, not taken lightly."

The hospital is expected to begin performing authorized abortions on Oct. 13, he said.

Central Saanich 'Sellout' Rejected

Central Saanich municipality will never have the reputation of selling out to developers, says Mayor A. M. Galbraith.

A firm zoning policy has been up-dated by Central Saanich Council this year to protect the municipality which, with the advent of sewers and completion of the Pat Bay highway, becomes ever more attractive to Victoria neighbours.

At least 85 per cent of Central Saanich is rolling farmland and treed park area and the comprehensive zoning plan ensures that it will remain that way, said Mayor Galbraith in an interview this week.

In 1967, council noted with alarm the beginnings of suburban sprawl and adopted a bylaw to ensure that a 10-acre zoning protected rural land from subdivision.

FARMS SAVED

With the installation of a $2,000,000 sewer this year, council has developed detailed zoning and subdivsion regulations to ensure that only those areas which are not agriculturally rich, will be devoted to residential growth.

The sewer is sized to accommodate the most densely built-up areas of Brentwood, Saanichton and Turgoose Point and cannot be tapped into on its long journey across the Peninsula.

Provision is made however for slow, natural growth of these residential areas with a five-acre periphery to take care of the homes (about 100 per year) which will be built until about 1995.

"By that time" says municipal assessor Gay Wheeler, "we will probably have to reconsider the single family home as a practical mode of living." Wheeler commented that Saanich municipality already reflects a trend toward higher-density dwelling.

Lot sizes in the residentially-zoned areas are smaller than average, about 7500 to 10,000 square feet. Frontages are generous however, 75 to 84 feet in width to avoid the strip development look. On major streets, setback requirements have been increased.

APARTMENT ZONING

To meet the demand for higher density dwelling which will arise when the Peninsula hospital is completed on Mr. Newton Cross Rd. and to accommodate elderly residents who can no longer maintain homes, Council is considering zoning for apartment, duplex and condominium construction.

These buildings will be limited to a height of three storeys and must be landscaped to municipal specifications.

In order to obtain a building permit, the developer must first produce $600 in cash for the sewer connection to each lot and is asked to pay $100 per lot for a municipal park preservation fund.

Construction of roads and installation of all services are the developer's responsibility and Central Saanich requires that boulevards planted with trees be added.

Now council is moving into the field of commercial growth and has asked Capital Regional Board planners to consider a "village" concept for Saanichton and Brentwood.

APPEAL HITS 11 PER CENT

A total of $83,177 has already been collected in this year's United Appeal campaign, 11½ per cent of the $724,931 target.

At this time last week $58,161 had been donated, 8.2 per cent of this year's goal, which is 12 per cent more than the amount raised in 1971.

Campaign chairman Mrs. Shirley Dowell says the reason for the early returns is largely due to early planning, which began in June.

The special names section, under Jack Mercer, began work in July and has already raised 50 per cent of its objective. The hotels and motels section also began collections that month.

All 55 divisional chairmen have been appointed.

The residential canvass will begin Oct. 16 and Mrs. Dowell reports that the campaign is still 600 short of the 6,000 volunteer canvassers that will be needed.

She says that each canvasser will be asked to call on between 20 and 25 houses, involving three hours of volunteer time, including callbacks.

It was announced today that Peter Darling, 1969 campaign chairman, has been appointed to succeed Eric Charman as first vice-president of the Community Chest of Greater Victoria.

When Darling was campaign chairman the United Appeal raised the largest amount on record to date — $635,731.

TRADITIONAL native talking stick, carved by B.C. parks carver Ralph Humphrys, was presented to park naturalist Freeman (Skipper) King at a surprise 81st birthday party in Strawberry Vale community hall Friday night. Talking sticks were placed in the ground to demand silence when an Indian chief was about to speak. Canoeists, anglers, archers, school board members, policemen, politicians, and people from the parks and forestry branches attended the party to pay tribute to Skipper's love of the outdoors and young people. He and Mrs. King were given several gifts including a cheque for $5,000, presented by Maj.-Gen. George Pearkes, to be used for whatever purpose Skipper secs fit.

'Honest' Sex Praised

Young people's sexual habits today may be "little different from those of rabbits" but their honest and open approach to human sexuality is a healthy positive force which should not be repressed or downgraded, Dr. Scott Wallace told a Human Sexuality Workshop Friday night.

A "whole new awareness of the rich human influence of sexuality" has revolutionized our generation, Wallace said, and many of our problems today relate to society's inability to accept this revolution.

Wallace, who besides being a physician is the MLA for Oak Bay, praised the younger generation's more enlightened view of human sexuality, blaming the repressive attitudes of past eras for many of our social problems today.

He urged parents to be more open to sexual and moral discussions within the family group, not only for the sake of family harmony but to alleviate a great deal of parental suffering over changing social mores.

NUDITY DEBATED

In explaining the younger generation's more objective, positive view of sexual expression, Wallace emphasized that he was not supporting this point of view, only describing what represents the thinking of a substantial number of young people today.

He pointed out that many dilemmas have emerged out of the sexual revolution.

Public nudity is constantly being debated in courts, he said, and the dividing line between propriety and obscenity is "almost as thin as a G-string."

"Apparently it is quite acceptable for females to expose almost all of their bodies on the beach, but illegal to remove these last few strips of cloth for the purpose of entertaining in a night club.

"Another similar problem created by the sexual revolution," he said, "is the dissemination of pornographic materials, which can be devastating in the hands of children and immature young people."

Wallace said pornography perhaps "serves a useful purpose in meeting the sexual needs of certain members of society who might otherwise inflict their anti-social behavior against other citizens."

RAPE DOWN

In Denmark, where pornography is not controlled, Wallace said, the number of forcible rapes reported is four per 100,000 population, compared to 18 per 100,000 in the United States.

As long as exposure to this type of material is voluntary, he added, nudity and pornography do have positive value and society as a whole is unlikely to suffer.

Man Jailed

A man who has a criminal record dating back to 1952 was sentenced to three months for possession of an offensive weapon by Judge E. D. Jorre de St. Jorre in provincial court today.

Howard E. Ettinger, 41, of no fixed address, was apprehended by Victoria police Sept. 22 on Fisgard Street after he was seen pointing a knife with a five-inch blade at another man.

Blanshard Problem Goes to Strachan

Highways Minister Robert Strachan is expected to meet Victoria and Saanich representatives next month on the problem of Rose-Blanshard street extension.

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich said he had approached the minister to arrange such a meeting — including both elected and administrative representatives — and was told Strachan wants "two or three weeks" to familiarize himself with the matter.

He said Strachan responded "positively" to the approach, which also has been given priority by Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

SOCREDS FAILED

The previous government, despite urgings from both municipalities and prodding of Greater Victoria Chambers of Commerce, failed to negotiate completion of the multi-laned route from downtown Victoria which dwindles to a normal street at Tolmie Avenue.

Ultimate objective was to connect the street to Patricia Bay and Trans-Canada highways in the vicinity of Town and Country shopping centre.

Another matter involving the interests of both Saanich and Victoria is future undertakings of the Capital Improvement District Commission which was founded by the Social Credit government.

Mayor Curtis said he did not disagree with Inner Harbor beautification as Victoria proposes, "but if the new government maintains the CIDC and the system of paying grants to the Municipalities of Greater Victoria, then I would certainly hope that we don't focus our attention solely on the Inner Harbor because there is so much more we should be looking at."

He suggested Portage Inlet and the Colquitz River system of Saanich and Craigflower Creek running through Thetis Park at View Royal as deserving attention for conservation and beautification.

Curtis also hoped the NDP government would allocate more money to the commission which has been getting a $200,000 budget in recent years. This amount has shrunk due to inflation and Curtis suggested it should be raised to $350,000 to $400,000 a year.

The CIDC has operated very well in a non-partisan way. It has done a good job and should be strengthened" he said.

Grocer Got Point Of 'Toy' Pistol

A man who may have used a toy gun to hold up a small grocery store Friday night, absconded with about $80 in cash.

Kwei Pin Leung, proprietor of Gladstone Food Market, 1358 Gladstone, said he wasn't about to argue with the man who was pointing the pistol at him. "I just looked at him in the face a few seconds and gave in."

Victoria police detectives said whether or not the gun was real is of no consequence — the offence is still regarded as armed robbery.

Leung said he was standing behind the cash register when the man entered the store about 9:40 p.m.

"I saw him carry a pistol — a gun. The gun was pointed at me. He asked me to open the cash register and give him all the money, he said.

"I put the money in his paper bag. He grabbed the bag, asked me to turn around and he ran away," said Leung.

The suspect is about 20 years old, five feet, eight inches tall, about 140 pounds with a long, thin face. He was wearing a light brown, shiny overcoat with a hood, police said.

Undersea Gardens Seeks New Image

An expensive refurbishing both inside and out has been planned next month for Pacific Undersea Gardens, an Inner Harbor fixture since June, 1969.

The renovations — which include a new location just across the wharf from its present spot, but no plans for a killer whale — are an attempt to create a whole new image.

Major shareholder for the venture, Robert Wright, of 4451 Shore Way, Saanich, is owner of Victoria's Sealand.

Wright added the Gardens will be moved to a position just inside the finger wharf near the Wax Museum within the next month.

Plans then include an entire facelift for the outside appearance and inside.

Wright said architect Allan Lester of Peterson and Lester has been hired and all work should be finished before next summer's tourist rush. A cost estimate is not available, he said.

The move will be the second for the Gardens, owned by Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd., of Vancouver.

It opened on the site of the present Sealand attraction in 1963 but was moved to the Inner Harbor in 1969.

Enumeration: First You Find the Voter

IT HAS BEEN MY PRIVILEGE this month to serve as chauffeur and handyman to an agent of the Crown. Temporary though her commission is, we both take it most seriously. We consult for as long as 10 minutes before tacking an official notice to a tree, and have spent an entire evening tracking down an elusive voter whose name belonged on the list of electors.

My wife, the federal enumerator has warned me that I'd better be careful what I write about the job into which she was sworn by the Willow Point postmistress. No blabbing of official secrets, no political partisanship, and not a word about the bag of potatoes the old logger gave us.

"He didn't give them to you," I protested at this point. "They were a gift to me, and I'm not a civil servant.

Nor am I spilling classified information when I point out that fining up a crew of enumerators presents its difficulties. There was a gap in the ranks, my dear one volunteered to fill it, and was assigned to cover a sizeable chunk of territory.

It started with a clutch of sideroads, zigzagged down the highway for several miles, and ambled out along a point of land to the sea.

I suggested that we start at the south end and work north, but the enumerator pulled rank on me.

Much better, she said, to do the side roads and the point first. Also, it wouldn't be necessary for me to get out of the car except when a Notice of Rural Enumeration sign was to be posted. Then, under her direction, I could extract hammer and carpet tacks from the glove compartment and put the notice up.

That was half a tank of gas and several hundred duly registered voters ago. With minor exceptions, I adhered to the behavior pattern laid down for me. Stayed in the car, that is, while the enumerator added names and occupations to the sheets on her clip-board.

Occasionally a resident dog of friendly inclination would lighten the tedium of waiting by trotting over for a non-political discussion. On one wooded byway, a fellow with a chain saw paused in his labors to pass the time of day. We agreed that the big northern coho salmon should be showing up soon in our home waters, but we didn't talk politics.

Sometimes too, the enumerator would drop a few spring details as I drove her to the next stop on her beat.

"Sorry to be so long back there," she would say, "but we were trading recipes." Or again, "You know that place with the hanging flower baskets? That stand they're hung from is an old hay rake."

There's no better way to learn a district than to serve as an enumerator, or to tag along with one. By the end of the first day, we had become aware of a Vancouver Island population trend only suspected before.

Until only a few years ago, the lands to the west of the Island Highway were given over largely to second growth that took root among the stumps of the evergreen forest that once clothed the coastal slopes. Today, the crowding alder stands that followed the fir woods are being cleared as fast as the subdividers can lay them low.

The push inland hasn't penetrated very deeply yet. On many a road, the new blacktop soon gives place to gravel, and the gravel peters out at the edge of an alder swamp.

But the houses and mobile homes are going in, the red logging-country earth is growing gardens, and a new chapter of Vancouver Island history is taking shape. Villages and probably towns are in the making: give them a few more years and they will acquire names.

By the time that startling realization burst upon me, I was thoroughly grooved into my background role as the husband of the lady enumerator in the yellow sweater. Then we came to the place by the sea where the old logger who grows the good potatoes still keeps a highrigger's belt and spurs hanging handy in his garage.

We fell to talking. I got out of the car. By the time the enumerator had finished her stint, the bag of new-dug potatoes was in my fist.

The list is complete now—all voters present and accounted for—and this evening we sampled those nonpartisan spuds. We've never tasted better.
